Cong Forces Attack Cambodians

PHNOM PENH, Cambodia, (AP) — Viet Cong forces have launched attacks against Cambodian troops, the nation's provisional head of state declared today.

In a nationwide broadcast Cheng Heng said that since Thursday "the Viet Cong have begun actions against the Cambodian people and our soldiers, in provinces near the border."

Tension was evident in this somnolent capital, where tanks raced through downtown streets in the early morning and took up positions on all major roads leading in and out of the city.

More troops in camouflage uniforms and carrying Communist-made AK47 rifles were evident.

Bridges across the Mekong River leading toward the provinces bordering Vietnam were heavily guarded.

Cheng Heng charged that the Viet Cong was forcing border villagers to listen to a tape recording of Prince Norodom Sihanouk, ousted chief of state now in Peking, calling for guerrilla warfare.

Demonstrations in favor of Sihanouk were reported in some provinces.

Viet Cong forces in civilian clothing were reported to have attacked a town less than 12 miles from Phnom Penh.

Cambodian tanks moved from Phnom Penh to the town of Koh Ky, southwest of the capital on an island formed by the Mekong River. Cambodian soldiers stopped all traffic in that direction.

French sources said by telephone from Koh Ky that 10 persons were reported killed before the Viet Cong left.

Cheng Heng also said the Viet Cong are forcing villagers to sell rice to Communist troops in Cambodia.

The government radio reported a group of youths egged on by the Viet Cong attacked government offices on Thursday in the provincial capital of Kampong Cham, 35 miles northeast of the capital, burned documents and commandeered a convoy of trucks to Phnom Penh.

The broadcast said Cambodian troops, aided by the people arrested the youths as they arrived at the outskirts of Phnom Penh.

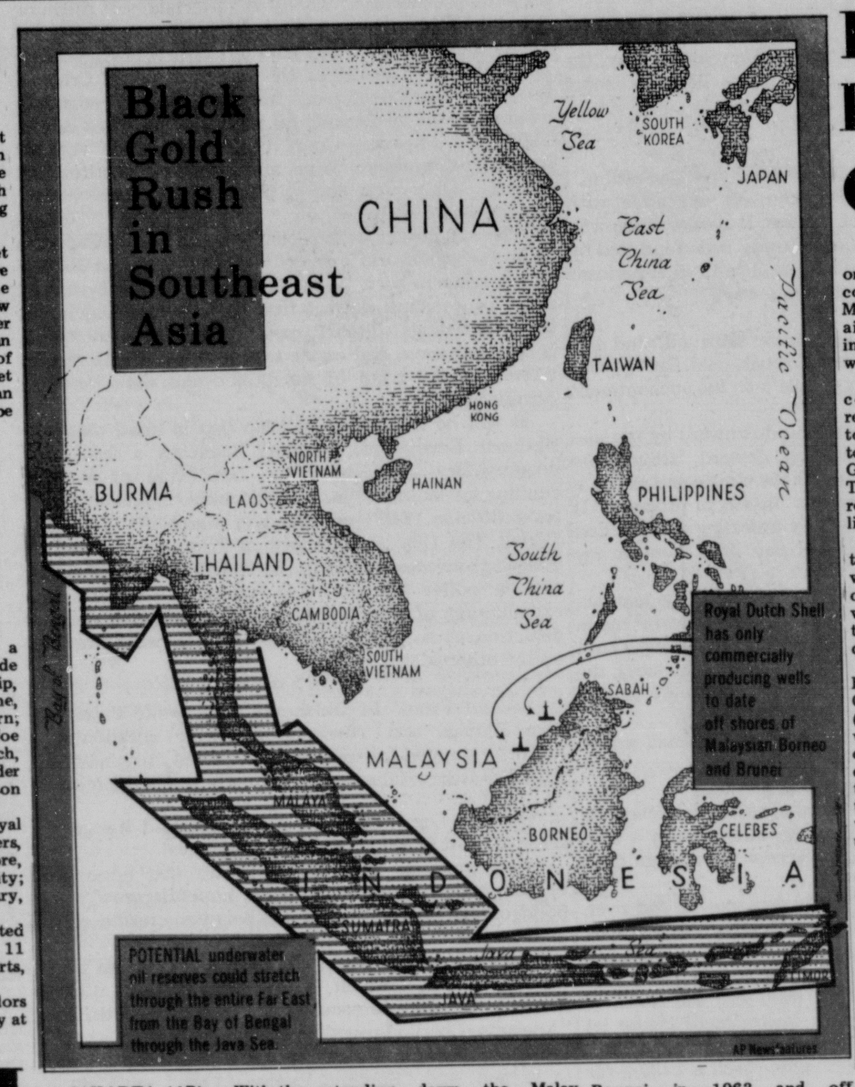
The broadcast said the demonstrators "sacked the offices of the Government of Salvation, burned documents, ransacked government headquarters and then forcibly took trucks to go to Phnom Penh. "The demonstration was intended to show that the Cambodian people are against the Government of Salvation, ... but the maneuver of the Viet Cong failed."

The Government of Salvation is the name the new regime has given itself.

Phnom Penh was under heavy security. All major routes to and from the city were closed by tanks. More troops were stationed at the airport, which was closed indefinitely to civilian aircraft.

There was no explanation for the closing of the airport, but there was speculation it was in connection with the departure for the staffs of the North Vietnamese and Viet Cong embassies.

North Vietnam and the Viet Cong said Thursday they were suspending relations with the leaders who overthrew Sihanouk, and Deputy Premier Sisowath Sirik Matak said an attack by the thousands of North Vietnamese and Viet Cong troops on the Cambodian side of the border "could not be ruled out."



Briefs Filed In School Fund Suit

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Further legal briefs were filed Thursday in a suit seeking to compel the Missouri State Board of Education to permit the use of public school teachers paid with federal funds for special services in nonpublic schools.

The briefs were filed on behalf of nine couples and their 78 children, who brought the suit, in reply to arguments by the Board of Education that it is not subject to the legal action.

The Board contends the suit is barred by the sovereign immunity provision of the 11th Amendment to the Constitution of the United States. It is claimed this immunity extends to state officers in the performance of their duties.

"Sovereign immunity has never been extended to government officials when there is a denial of a right, privilege or immunity secured by the U.S. Constitution," the plaintiffs argued in their briefs.

Missouri Atty. Gen. John C. Danforth said in an opinion earlier this year that federally paid public school teachers may provide certain special services in nonpublic schools.

The Board of Education at a Feb. 6 meeting decided to stick with a 1965 policy limiting the use of public funds to public schools.

Missouri Sens. Stuart Symington and Thomas Eagleton and Congresswoman Leonor K. Sullivan of the state's 3rd District, have asked Department of Health, Education and Welfare officials to look into the matter.

Symington and Eagleton addressed their request to Dr. James E. Allen Jr., assistant HEW secretary for education.

Mrs. Sullivan wrote to HEW Secretary Robert H. Finch saying the state Board's position "seems to be completely at variane with the federal law and the regulations of the U.S. Office of Education."

Congressmen William L. Clay, James W. Symington, W.R. Hull Jr. and Richard Boll joined in requesting the federal investigation.

Israeli Pilots Claim Five MIGs Bagged

TEL AVIV (AP) — Israeli pilots reported their second banner day this week today, claiming they shot down five Egyptian MIG21s in dogfights over Port Suez, at the southern end of the Suez Canal.

Egypt admitted the loss of one plane but claimed one Israeli jet exploded in the air and another was hit by Egyptian fighters. Israel denied the claims.

An Egyptian spokesman said an estimated 80 planes—40 from each air force—tangled in the melee, making it the biggest air battle reported since the 1967 war.

An Israeli spokesman said the MIGs were downed by cannon fire and rockets at "medium altitude." He said one plane exploded in flight, another crashed with its pilot, and the other three pilots were seen parachuting.

The Israelis said their planes made another 30-minute raid at noon on the southern sector of the canal.

It was the second major aerial victory reported by Israel in three days and the biggest bag of Egyptian planes claimed by Israel's pilots in more than six months.

JAKARTA (AP) — With the stability of the Middle East oil supply in question, and the world's industrialized nations seeking low- sulphur oil, prospectors are scouring potentially oil- rich offshore areas in Southeast Asia.

So far, the search is concentrated around the island of Borneo, shared by Indonesia, Malaysia and Brunei. But under an agreement with the United Nations Economic Commission for Asia and the Far East (ECAFE), technicians from the United States, Japan, Nationalist China and South Korea are conducting surveys in the East China and Yellow Seas.

An ECAFE report says the results of that exploratory drilling have "indicated that the shallow sea floor between Japan and Taiwan might contain one of the most prolific oil and gas reservoirs in the world, possibly comparing favorably with the Persian Gulf area."

Oilmen believe the potential under- water reserves could stretch through the entire Far East, starting in the Bay of Bengal off the coast of Burma, extending down the Malay Peninsula off the shores of Thailand and Malaysia and running through the Java Sea along the Indonesian archipelago.

Companies from the United States, Europe, Australia, Canada and Japan are planning to spend at least $500 million in exploration over the next four years.

While the expense is considerable and the risk high, the companies believe it is worth the trouble because of political uncertainties in the Middle East, where the Arab nations who control most of the oil the West depends on are becoming increasingly anti- Western in their outlook.

Also, Southeast Asian oil is extremely low in sulphur content, an attribute of importance to countries which are concerned about air pollution.

The only company actually producing oil in commercial quantities from offshore wells in Southeast Asia is Royal Dutch Shell, which struck oil off Brunei in 1963 and off Malaysian Borneo in 1954. The Brunei production amounts to 69,000 barrels daily, while Malaysian Borneo production is a scant 9,400 barrels a day.

Indonesia's government - owned oil company Pertamina has signed 30 agreements with major petroleum companies and independents. Pertamina leases the Indonesian oil fields in large lots— bout 30 million acres each— but the price is expensive.

Under the agreements, foreign concerns have no concessions, but serve as contractors to the state oil company. Much of the equipment the overseas firms brings in to the country automatically becomes Pertamina property. Oil prospectors pay the full cost of their exploration.

With the start of production, Pertamina allows the foreign companies to keep 40 per cent of the total production to cover expenses. Of the rest, the companies get 35 per cent and Pertamina gets 65 per cent. The figures mean that the foreign companies have rights to 61 per cent of the oil they produce.

Mrs. Grueling was slain and a customer, Nicholas J. Orlando, 20, of Jennings, Mo., was wounded in the bread store holdup. Both were shot in the head, as was Mrs. Turner.

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) — Gov. Warren E. Hearnes and his family went home to Charleston today to spend the Easter weekend, his office reported.

Hearnes is scheduled to go to Columbia Monday to attend a birthday dinner for State Sen. A. Basey Vanlandingham, D-Columbia.

Thursday, he will tape an interview for later use by Columbia television station KOMU.

St. Louis Tax Support Sought

VANDALIA, Mo. (AP)—State Sen. Richard Southern, D-Monroe City, today called on public officials of St. Louis city and county to get behind the campaign in support of the income tax revision bill that is subject to voter test April 7.

"There is almost no activity in support of the income tax referendum in the St. Louis area except for the outstanding support of the media," Southern said.

He suggested the citizens and officials of the metropolitan area may be tired of hearing about taxes, "but they should think and realize that their schools, mental institutions, aged and needy will benefit or suffer along with all sections of the state, depending on the passage or defeat of the income tax April 7th."

Misleading Statistics Charged

SPRINGFIELD, Mo. (AP) — Advocates of an income tax increase in Missouri have been using misleading statistics to support their position, Rep. Richard M. Marshall, R-St. Louis, said today.

"How many times have we heard the state is broke? Actually, the state has an average cash balance of more than $210 million," Marshall said in remarks prepared for a meeting of Greene County Republican Women.

He said "appropriation sleight of hand" gives taxpayers the false impression Missouri is short of funds.

Easter Flights Chancy

WASHINGTON (AP) — With one-fourth of the air traffic controllers in the East and Midwest off the job, the nation's airlines warned today of increasing delays in Easter weekend travel.

"The airlines are consolidating schedules and rearranging flight patterns so as to minimize the inconvenience to their passengers," said Stuart G. Tipton, president of the Air Transport Association, a group representing all the scheduled air lines.

"Because of the additional travel over this busy Easter weekend and because the strike of some air traffic controllers will slow the system down, travelers must expect some delay."

A call Thursday night by the Professional Air Traffic Controllers Organization (PATCO) for a nationwide walkout seemed to have little effect on the number of controllers off the job. Nor did a telegram from the government to each absent controller warning of "prompt action" for unexcused absences.

There were 259 absentees out of a total 1,025 normally scheduled for a Friday day shift in the first 10 air traffic control centers that reported to Federal Aviation Administration headquarters today.There are 21 such centers nationwide.

But while the absentee rate remained constant on the third day of the controllers' demonstration, there was a significant change in the biggest trouble spot of all—the Islip, N.Y. center that controls traffic for New York City's three airports. Only 46 of a normal force of 146 reported for work, the FAA said. On Thursday half the controllers were out.

Atlanta, where all 90 controllers were at work Thursday, only 71 came in today. But the Cleveland center, singled out as a cause of some major delays, had 96 of 151 working today—an attendance rate of 62 per cent, where the absentee rate was more than half Thursday.

In Boston, 79 of a normal 85 showed; at Chicago it was 99 of 106; Indianapolis 67 of 79; Jacksonville, Fla., 102 of 105; Kansas City 37 of 65; Miami 70 of 78 and Washington, 100 of 120.

The control centers handle air traffic en route once the flights are out of the control of the nation's 350 airport towers. There has been absenteeism in the towers also, but to date they haven't caused major concern.

But today, 27 of 32 reported sick at the Minneapolis-St. Paul International Airport tower. There were absentees at Indianapolis Municipal for the first time and 7 of 20 air controllers at Detroit Metropolian Airport reported sick.

Clifton F. Von Kann, vice president of the Air Transport Association said the airlines have not been able to substantiate the PATCO claims that inexperienced personnel are creating unsafe conditions.

"We are not taking only the word of the FAA," Von Kann said, adding the airlines are running independent safety checks.

Von Kann said that of between 6,000 and 7,000 scheduled daily flights, apparently 280 were canceled on Wednesday, and the number of cancellations was smaller Thursday.

The FAA sent out telegrams to absent air controllers warning that "prompt action" would be taken within 24 hours if they failed to obey a court order and return to work.

Attorney F. Lee Bailey, executive director of PATCO, the Professional Air Traffic Controllers Organization, Thursday night called for the walkout, saying "The issue is no longer fatigue by traffic controllers but safety."

Four Injured

A car running up the wrong ramp on Interstate 55, was involved in a two- car collision, today at 2:20 a.m., the junction with highway 62, four miles east of Sikeston.

A 1969 Mustang, driven by Georgia Abshier, 19, Tallapoosa, attempted to go south on Interstate 55, when she entered the ramp of the northbound lane. Her car was sideswiped by a 1965 Ford, driven by Abnor Cockrell, 24, Detroit, injuring four.

Miss Abshier was bruised.

Three passengers in the Cockrell car were injured- Frank Johnson, 19, had head cuts and Ernestine Johnson, 22, and right leg cuts. Both are from Detroit. Gloria Conner, 18, St. Louis, was bruised.

The injured were taken to the Missouri Delta Community hospital.

JAKARTA (AP) — With the stability of the Middle East oil supply in question, and the world's industrialized nations seeking low- sulphur oil, prospectors are scouring potentially oil- rich offshore areas in Southeast Asia.

So far, the search is concentrated around the island of Borneo, shared by Indonesia, Malaysia and Brunei. But under an agreement with the United Nations Economic Commission for Asia and the Far East (ECAFE), technicians from the United States, Japan, Nationalist China and South Korea are conducting surveys in the East China and Yellow Seas.

An ECAFE report says the results of that exploratory drilling have "indicated that the shallow sea floor between Japan and Taiwan might contain one of the most prolific oil and gas reservoirs in the world, possibly comparing favorably with the Persian Gulf area."

Oilmen believe the potential under- water reserves could stretch through the entire Far East, starting in the Bay of Bengal off the coast of Burma, extending down the Malay Peninsula off the shores of Thailand and Malaysia and running through the Java Sea along the Indonesian archipelago.

Companies from the United States, Europe, Australia, Canada and Japan are planning to spend at least $500 million in exploration over the next four years.

While the expense is considerable and the risk high, the companies believe it is worth the trouble because of political uncertainties in the Middle East, where the Arab nations who control most of the oil the West depends on are becoming increasingly anti- Western in their outlook.

Also, Southeast Asian oil is extremely low in sulphur content, an attribute of importance to countries which are concerned about air pollution.

The only company actually producing oil in commercial quantities from offshore wells in Southeast Asia is Royal Dutch Shell, which struck oil off Brunei in 1963 and off Malaysian Borneo in 1954. The Brunei production amounts to 69,000 barrels daily, while Malaysian Borneo production is a scant 9,400 barrels a day.

Indonesia's government - owned oil company Pertamina has signed 30 agreements with major petroleum companies and independents. Pertamina leases the Indonesian oil fields in large lots— bout 30 million acres each- but the price is expensive.

Under the agreements, foreign concerns have no concessions, but serve as contractors to the state oil company. Much of the equipment the overseas firms brings in to the country automatically becomes Pertamina property. Oil prospectors pay the full cost of their exploration.

With the start of production, Pertamina allows the foreign companies to keep 40 per cent of the total production to cover expenses. Of the rest, the companies get 35 per cent and Pertamina gets 65 per cent. The figures mean that the foreign companies have rights to 61 per cent of the oil they produce.

St. Louis Tax Support Sought

VANDALIA, Mo. (AP)—State Sen. Richard Southern, D-Monroe City, today called on public officials of St. Louis city and county to get behind the campaign in support of the income tax revision bill that is subject to voter test April 7.

"There is almost no activity in support of the income tax referendum in the St. Louis area except for the outstanding support of the media," Southern said.

He suggested the citizens and officials of the metropolitan area may be tired of hearing about taxes, "but they should think and realize that their schools, mental institutions, aged and needy will benefit or suffer along with all sections of the state, depending on the passage or defeat of the income tax April 7th."

Misleading Statistics Charged

SPRINGFIELD, Mo. (AP) — Advocates of an income tax increase in Missouri have been using misleading statistics to support their position, Rep. Richard M. Marshall, R-St. Louis, said today.

"How many times have we heard the state is broke? Actually, the state has an average cash balance of more than $250 million," Marshall said in remarks prepared for a meeting of Greene County Republican Women.

He said "appropriation sleight of hand" gives taxpayers the false impression Missouri is short of funds.

POOR CHARLIE SAYS!

One thing for sure, every day in every way the struggle to make both ends meet becomes more complicated.

I AM AMERICA!

The following, a digest from "Trail and Timberline," was written by Ben B. Franklin, an executive with Associated Clubs in Topeka, Kansas. It is easy to see why the words of Mr. Franklin have already been reprinted by many publications. Wouldn't it be nice if all Americans thought of their country in the same way?

It is spring.

Leaves have greened, girls have browned, and I'm yawning from my fitful sleep through cold. Dusty roads once again invite my restless people into the enchantment of mountain forests.

A road is beckoning - plunging downward by the side of a churning stream, stretching onward, around the hillside, climbing upward through the clouds and sky. It is there, slashed into nature by the "march of progress." It is there, carved into my forests by unfeeling construction workers calloused by orders and pay. It is there- in my wilderness.

Flowers push up beside the road... tiny gentian, forget- me- nots. They seem to plead, "Don't forget me in your hurry to build, Mister Man." I am America! Don't forget the beauty of my sunsets, the thirst of my trees, the laughing of my brooks, my drops of dew, my singing deer. Don't kill, don't destroy, Mister Man!

The road rushes past. It has no time for small voices. Can a bulldozer hear the cry of flowers? It says only, "Make way! We're moving, building, growing!"

A sparrow alights on the hard surface. Her searching feet don't find the friendliness she knows from a tree. Something is alien here; can she accept the road in place of the branch?

A porcupine, with slow, careful steps goes to the river. He playfully slides in the water, stroking his needles clean, washing his sleep away. He seems to say: "I am alive and I am grateful for these joys; I like the sun and the sky and the insects and the bubbles of wind and the rustle of pines. Don't let these disappear, Mister Man! Please let me keep them!"

A flower, a sparrow, a porcupine- each is calling for preservation, for love. It's my wilderness, my mountains and lakes and my forests; it's my animals and my prayers which are torn in the rushing savagery of today! I am America! Please hear me, dear God...

AMERICANS ON THE MOVE

Patterns of migration are changing in this country, according to U.S. News & World Report, where people always seem to be on the move.

The shifts that show up are being studied closely by businessmen, politicians and government planners.

Now it is noted that the West, an area that has grown greatly as a result of having many people move in and relatively few move out, seems to be less of a magnet. Compared with 1961-66, more people are shifting out of the West each year, while slightly fewer are going there to live.

The South also is a scene of interesting shifts in population. More Negroes are moving back into this area, perhaps after discovering that the North is not exactly the "promised land."

At the same time, fewer blacks are flocking to the troubled, congested cities of the Northeast.

Biggest change of the South, however, is the rising loss of whites. The number leaving the section has grown nearly a fifth since 1961- 66, compared with an increase of only 11 per cent in white arrivals.

Losses by migration grew in the Northeast in the 1960s, but came almost to a halt in the Midwest. It doesn't mean quite the end of migration from the farms to cities, but the Agriculture Dept. believes that there has been some further slowing in this off- the farm movement during the last few years.

Rural counties in Minnesota, Iowa, Missouri, the Dakotas, Nebraska and Kansas account for the bulk of the flow of population from farms to urban areas. The number of Negroes on farms, primarily in the South, has been reduced about 60 per cent in 10 years' time. There simply aren't many left to move.

There is no question where the big growth lies-- in the suburbs. More whites than ever are moving to these neighborhoods and are being joined by a growing volume of Negroes.

Population movements already have caused the Census Bureau to alter its predictions on numbers of representatives in Congress that some states will be entitled to after this year's head count.

Moving remains a prime way in which Americans seek to better their jobs, incomes and surroundings. The official estimates show that the people who tend to pull up stakes are young adults especially those recently married, persons without jobs, and those with incomes between $3,000 and $7,000 a year.

In short, the ease with which Americans can move is one evidence that this is still a "land of opportunity."

But we believe that most Americans will realize that the opportunities are available in their own communities -- if they want to find it -- and there should be increasing stability in the Mo-Kan area for those who want to work.

TELEVISION IN THE COURTROOM

If the exercise of justice is a public event, why not let television cameras into the courtroom? There are a flurry of rejoinders to that question: TV would make a circus out of the courts; judges, lawyers and witnesses would try to become "performers" under the klieg lights; it would encourage outbursts and grandstanding by radicals. Television, however, continues to seek a role as something other than merely an entertainment medium. And it keeps knocking on the courtroom door.

As for the courts, they have left little room for debate on this issue. Rule 53 of the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure bars television from all federal courts. In handing down its decision on the Billie Sol Estes case in 1965, the Supreme Court came within one vote of prohibiting television from all courts on constitutional grounds. Only two states, Texas and Colorado, allow cameras in the court.

The American Bar Association sums up what appears to be the legal world's majority view in its Canon 35. The Canon reads in part: "...the broadcasting or televising of court proceedings detract from the essential dignity of the proceedings, district participants and witnesses in giving testimony, and create misconceptions with respect thereto in the mind of the public and should not be permitted."

It will be interesting to keep that in mind when the National Educational Network launches a four- part documentary-- the entire six- hour trial of a Black Panther in Denver, Colo. -- on successive nights beginning (at 8:30 p.m. EST) on Monday, March 23. The film, "Trial: The City and County of Denver v. Lauren R. Watson," involves a charge of resisting and interfering with a police officer. It is believed to be the first examination of the judicial system through a detailed depiction of an entire trial. The shoe, in other words, is on the other foot.

NEW YORK (AP) — Things a columnist might never know if he didn't open his mail:

The United States is one of the safest of civilized countries in which to drive an automobile. It has an annual mortality rate of 54.4 per 100,000 registered motor cars compared with 67.9 for France, 80.2 for Italy, 85.4 for Japan and 126 for West Germany. Norway has the lowest— 53.4.

Whenever a new President moves into the White House, a baseball kept in the Hall of Fame at Cooperstown, N.Y., is taken to the nation's capital so his autograph can be added. The baseball is now regarded as priceless.

If you want your horoscope checked, your best bet is France. That country has 30,000 astrologers. If you want your psyche checked, come to New York City. Nearly 40 per cent of U.S. psychiatrists practice here.

Our people, whose unofficial motto once was, "take a chance," are getting more cautious. Well, anyway, more than 63.4 million Americans are now covered by some form of disability insurance.

All it would take to wipe out the U.S. national debt would be for every man, woman and child to sit down and write a check for $2,000 to Uncle Sam. The only trouble with carrying out this simple solution is—most of the checks would bounce.

Looking ahead: A British medical journal estimates that if promising new drugs can be developed to slow the aging process, within the next decade 10 to 15 more productive years can be added to man's life span. One problem: at present two ut of three elderly people suffer from chronic disease.

Lady, do you have bags under your eyes? Here's an old remedy: grate a large raw potato, put the grated material in the folds of a handkerchief. Then lie down for half an hour while holding the potato-and-linen sandwich to your eyes. When you rise they should sparkle like those of Sophia Loren.

Good news: An increasing number of business firms have adopted zj&nb)own programs to fight alcoholism, which afflicts some 6¼ million Americans. Some of the firms report a recovery rate of 60 to 70 per cent among alcoholic employes who cooperate with the program.

The good earth: You don't have to live on a farm or in the suburbs to raise a crop. More than four million U.S. city dwellers now have indoor gardens or outdoor gardens on patios and rooftops.

Where the money goes: A decade ago the average white collar worker paid out 27 per cent of his income in direct taxes. Today the figure is 34 per cent.

Worth remembering: "What we have, let us be thankful for; what we haven't got, let us hope would make us miserable if we had it; when you can't have, abuse."

Contrary to popular opinion, the need for reading or distantvision glasses rarely causes headaches.

If you don't like to invest in stamps as a hedge against inflation, you might collect sea shells. Some of them are quite valuable. An Austrian emperor once paid $20,000 for a wentletrap, one of the rarest and most precious shells.

It was Mark Twain's mother who told him, "Never learn to do anything. If you don't learn, you'll always find someone else to do it for you."

U.S. Savings Bonds are synonymous with indestructibility. If you lose yours, no matter how odd the circumstances, you can get a replacement at no cost from the Treasury. Take the situation of a boy in a rural community who went out to the mailbox to get the mail. On the way back to the house, the wind blew an envelope containing a Savings Bond into the path of a rotary lawn mower. Bond and envelope were shredded. The Bond was replaced.

* * *

The "indestructibility" of U.S. Savings Bonds also crosses international boundaries. One person took a $1,000 Bond with him to Cuba, in 1961. Since Government regulations made it illegal for him to hold the Bond, he buried it in the ground. When he left Cuba, he could not bring the Bond back. The Treasury deemed it unrecoverable and a new Bond was issued.

His father laughed and said: "Don't be silly, there's no such thing as a monster." The child continued to cry and his father said: "Look, I'll show you." He yanked open the closet door and there stood Charlie.

For a minute the husband stared at his friend. Then, thoroughly angry, he said:

WIVES SEEK AID FOR P.O.W.'S

At Christmas time, the press gave considerable attention to two members of the far-left Women's Strike for Peace who went to Hanoi and there met a few U.S. soldiers who were communist prisoners. But very little publicity was given to four wives of U.S. pilots missing in action who travelled to ten world capitols at almost the same time, seeking help for our prisoners of war.

The four wives were Mrs. Patricia Mearns, Mrs. Constance Hestle, Mrs. Carole Hanson, and Mrs. Patricia Hardy, all from California. They visited Rome, Cairo, Moscow, New Delhi, Bangkok, Vientiane, Saigon, Hong Kong, and Tokyo to seek support for their cause.

In Saigon they spent over three hours with General Creighton Abrams, who told them: "You are great Americans, great wives and great women. I shall never forget you."

They also visited communist soldiers held prisoner by our troops and found them to be "well fed and even caring for pet dogs in their prison compound." This is very different from communist treatment of our soldiers, as described by escaped prisoners.

By contrast, Robert Dornan, Los Angeles television personality who accompanied the wives, said of the "Strike for Peace" women: "The two American leftist women were never out of the sight of their communist hostess and never visited a POW camp, yet when they came back to America the local press picked up the communist propaganda photos given them by these women..." Every possible encouragement should be given to the courageous efforts of these four wives. They should become much more widely known. HLH

Washington Merry - Go - Round

By Jack Anderson

WASHINGTON--President Nixon, after deeply pondering how to keep his pledge to end the draft, has indicated to intimates that the happy day will have to be postponed.

His military advisers have warned that the armed forces can't possibly be maintained at the present three-million-man level without conscription.

Even if the armed services could get along with a million less men, the Pentagon estimates it would cost a budget-busting $4 billion a year to change over to an all-volunteer force. The money would be needed for higher pay, better housing, more fringe benefits and other incentives to attract volunteers.

Yet the Pentagon has wasted stupendous sums training men for duties that they abandon as fast as their enlistments run out. Only one out of every six enlisted men sign up for a second hitch.

MILITARY DROPOUTS

The loss is even more costly among men with special skills. It costs the taxpayers thousands, for example, to train a pilot. Yet one in three Air Force pilots and two in three Navy pilots drop out. Even among Annapolis graduates, only two in three stay in the service.

Those who reamin in uniform also are inclined to be the more mediocre men who prefer the security of the services to the uncertainty of the civilian world.

The President would like to reduce the draft gradually and to improve the quality of the military services by increasing their appeal. He has asked Secretary of Defense Mel Laird to prepare new programs that will encourage men to re-enlist.

Laird is ready to offer up to 10,000 new family housing units, educational opportunities for servicemen who would like to study, and various financial inducements. He is even willing to abolish KP and hire civilians to do the hated kitchen work.

It remains to be seen whether better housing and dreams of no KP will attract enough volunteers to fill the military quotas. But no one in the Wite House expects an early end to the draft.

MURPHY'S TAXES

Senator George Murphy, R-Calif., who accepts a $20,000-a-year consultant's fee and other financial rewards from Technicolor, Inc., apparently has been tardy with his taxes on this extra income.

A high official informed this column that Murphy usually is short $3,000 or $4,000 on his income tax payments each year and that the Internal Revenue Service has trouble collecting. In 1968, IRS was forced to file a $3,218.29 tax lien against him.

Murphy told us that he had been late in paying his taxes only twice and that the tax lien had been slapped on him while he was trying to sell securities to meet his tax obligation. He accused IRS of bringing the action to cause him political embarrassment.

Note: Technicolor, incidentally, is under indictment in Connecticut on 11 counts of mail fraud in what insiders describe as one of the biggest postal fraud cases in history.

Sen. Murphy, who sits on the company's board of directors, said the case came up at a board meeting. Beyond that, he claimed no knowledge of it.

The government alleges that Technicolor, its distributing companies and salesmen swindled about 900 Connecticut residents out of $250,000 to $500,000 by misrepresenting the value of home movie equipment being sold in a mail-order package deal. The investigation covered eight states, which indicates that the alleged fraud was nationwide. An outside possibility exists that the case will be tried before the June 2 California primary. Warren Christopher, a deputy Attorney General in the Johnson administration, has gone to work for the California law firm which represents Technicolor. He is not working on the mail fraud case, however.

PECKING ORDER

Just as observers carefully watch how Soviet leaders line up in the reviewing stand each May Day for clues to the power alignment in the Kremlin, the Congressional Directory has always been a guide to who's "in" with the President. The latest editon, therefore, caused a stir in the backrooms.

President Nixon's pied piper, Pat Moynihan, was moved up from seventh to second place in the pecking order. More than a dozen White House aides were dropped out of the Congressional Directory entirely. Among them were Harry Dent, the President's Southern strategist; Pat Buchanan, the speech writer who prepared Vice President Agenw's attack upon the TV networks; Clark Mollenhoff, the President's trouble-shooter; and Harry Flemming, the White House patronage czar.

The new listing was prepared by press secretary Ron Ziegler under the supervision of Bob Haldeman and John Ehrlichman, the two Prussian nobs who run theWhite House staff. A spokesman insisted to this column, however, that there was no special significance to the Congressional Directory changes.

MAIL STRIKE RADICALS

The nation's 1,300 postal inspectors have been alerted to check on attempts by militant young radicals to exploit the mail strike to advance their revolutionary goals.

The Post Offic's Inspector General, William J. Cotter, discounted reports, however, that the radicals were partially responsible for starting the New York walkout.

Cotter said he had received a few scattered reports of agitation by young militants, but said they appeared to have no significant effect.

Inside Labor

By Victor Riesel

Inside the White House: why President Nixon took the troop gamble.

New York – Those of us who have had a few private minutes with President Nixon recently know that he has had it up to here – right up to the throat. Many a union, especially the rank and file, have been going for his jugular.

These men and women are out of control. Their leadership has lost them. They're split. They're making deals within deals, moving on wheels within wheels in the congress.

So President Nixon late last week decided not to back away from this postal crisis – especially that bellowing, stomping, screaming, howling rank-and-file mob meetings at one of which Brooklyn's Letter Carriers Union (Branch 41) President Jack Leventhal roared, "Ours is the most powerful union in the U.S."

The President knows his labor history. He knows what it means to call in troops. But last Friday and Saturday he decided that American labor would not be Europeanized.

Again and again he told some of his close aides that he did not want a France in the U.S. He did not want a French-like endless chain of two-and three-day stoppages (and sometimes longer) of federal employes in military and naval installations (where many workers, of course, are civilian as well as federal employes).

Mr. Nixon is aware that within a week or so the nation faces over-the-road trucking and railroad paralysis. He knew, as he made his decision, that the mercurial professional Air Traffic Controllers Orgainzation had been pressuring Transportation Secretary John Volpe.

During these private discussions, Labor Secretary Shultz said to the President that "the only thing worse than a wildcat strike is a successful wildcat strike."

The dignity of the U.S. was at stake. The laws of the U.S. were in jeopardy. The federal courts were being defied by postal wildcatters in terms as lewd as any used by The Rat, The Village Other, and literateurs whose manuscripts are toilet walls.

What alternative did Richard Nixon have to the declaration of a national emergency?Let's talk bluntly. There always are the inside stories behind the public reports. The President and Mr. Schultz did not contact AFL-CIO President George Meany, except to have Assistant Secretary of Labor Bill Usery send work over the weekend that the President meant what he said about using the Army – and would not be fazed by danger of a national labor stoppage.

This was no slight. This was indeed to avoid embarrassing Mr. Meany – who, powerful though he is, really has no control over the 14 feuding national postal unions. Some of them are in the AFL-CIO. Some are not. Some agree on the creation of a postal corporation. Some don't.

Some had been pressuring congressmen, warning of the creation of a $10 million or a $4 million political war chest to defeat those who crossed them. And there is an election this fall, after all.

Congressmen got whipsawed. There even is a feud between some postal unions and the national AFL-CIO Union. There is adeep split inside the National Association of Letter Carriers (AFL-CIO). Most rank and file does not want a postal corporation. It would rather bargain with an election-conscious Congress for wages.

Privately their national president, the feverish, shaken, fatigued, $30,000-a-year James Rademacher – whom even other national union presidents don't really know – was for a postal corporation.

So he whipped up the story of SDS infiltration. There is no such. He dredged this one up from the fact that when last July some 80 letter carriers at the Bronx Kingsbridge Post Office Station went on a sick-in, some SDS cells called on the workers and peasants to come to a meeting or two. Few came.

Then Mr. Rademacher charged that the New York locals were infiltrated. There are those who believe that Mr. Rademacher was seeing neo-leftists behind every bogged down mail bag because the New York Letter Carriers are anti-Rademacher. He had lost control.

So when he couldn't lick them, he joined them. He said he'd call for a national strike. Well, some listened. Some didn't. Then he said he'd ask George Meany to call a national general strike of some 14 million workers. Fact is that he has not been talking with Mr. Meany and it would be quite a trick to paralyze the nation even if Mr. Meany recognized Mr. Rademacher's voice on the phone.

Someone had to take leadership. Land, air and train paralysis are threatened on other labor fronts. There have been threats of municipal general strikes – in San Francisco, Atlanta and other cities. There seems to be no satisfying the rank and file. So Richard Nixon decided that the majesty of the U.S. government -- jeered at, howled at, blackened in the streets, harassed, besieged, and bombed – would take the leadership.

He decided the time had come to move. And this -- as the dean of labor conciliators and presidential advisers, David Cole, said – is the turning point.

"There must be some way to settle federal, state, county and municipal strikes," said Mr. Cole as he heard the President's emergency broadcast. "We have used Congress, commissions, fact-finding boards, civil service edicts and other patchwork.

"The President's speech is a turning point. What is the government going to do to preserve its long-established policy of resolving wage and other disputes without permitting strikes?

Well, for the first time in recent history a "peacetime" President has used troops to break a strike.

He had no alternative. He'll have none until reason returns to the rank and file.

They must learn they can't get everything they demand every time they demand it. They must learn that the fighter who hasn't lost one never fought one.

They must learn there is a public and government and authorities sworn to uphold law.

POOR CHARLIE SAYS!

One thing for sure, every day in every way the struggle to make both ends meet becomes more complicated.

I AM AMERICA!

The following, a digest from "Trail and Timberline," was written by Ben B. Franklin, an executive with Associated Clubs in Topeka, Kansas. It is easy to see why the words of Mr. Franklin have already been reprinted by many publications. Wouldn't it be nice if all Americans thought of their country in the same way?

It is spring.

Leaves have greened, girls have browned, and I'm yawning from my fitful sleep through cold. Dusty roads once again invite my restless people into the enchantment of mountain forests.

A road is beckoning - plunging downward by the side of a churning stream, stretching onward, around the hillside, climbing upward through the clouds and sky. It is there, slashed into nature by the "march of progress." It is there, carved into my forests by unfeeling construction workers calloused by orders and pay. It is there- in my wilderness.

Flowers push up beside the road... tiny gentian, forget- me- nots. They seem to plead, "Don't forget me in your hurry to build, Mister Man." I am America! Don't forget the beauty of my sunsets, the thirst of my trees, the laughing of my brooks, my drops of dew, my singing deer. Don't kill, don't destroy, Mister Man!

The road rushes past. It has no time for small voices. Can a bulldozer hear the cry of flowers? It says only, "Make way! We're moving, building, growing!"

A sparrow alights on the hard surface. Her searching feet don't find the friendliness she knows from a tree. Something is alien here; can she accept the road in place of the branch?

A porcupine, with slow, careful steps goes to the river. He playfully slides in the water, stroking his needles clean, washing his sleep away. He seems to say: "I am alive and I am grateful for these joys; I like the sun and the sky and the insects and the bubbles of wind and the rustle of pines. Don't let these disappear, Mister Man! Please let me keep them!"

A flower, a sparrow, a porcupine- each is calling for preservation, for love. It's my wilderness, my mountains and lakes and my forests; it's my animals and my prayers which are torn in the rushing savagery of today! I am America! Please hear me, dear God...

AMERICANS ON THE MOVE

Patterns of migration are changing in this country, according to U.S. News & World Report, where people always seem to be on the move.

The shifts that show up are being studied closely by businessmen, politicians and government planners.

Now it is noted that the West, an area that has grown greatly as a result of having many people move in and relatively few move out, seems to be less of a magnet. Compared with 1961-66, more people are shifting out of the West each year, while slightly fewer are going there to live.

The South also is a scene of interesting shifts in population. More Negroes are moving back into this area, perhaps after discovering that the North is not exactly the "promised land."

At the same time, fewer blacks are flocking to the troubled, congested cities of the Northeast.

Biggest change of the South, however, is the rising loss of whites. The number leaving the section has grown nearly a fifth since 1961- 66, compared with an increase of only 11 per cent in white arrivals.

Losses by migration grew in the Northeast in the 1960s, but came almost to a halt in the Midwest. It doesn't mean quite the end of migration from the farms to cities, but the Agriculture Dept. believes that there has been some further slowing in this off- the farm movement during the last few years.

Rural counties in Minnesota, Iowa, Missouri, the Dakotas, Nebraska and Kansas account for the bulk of the flow of population from farms to urban areas. The number of Negroes on farms, primarily in the South, has been reduced about 60 per cent in 10 years' time. There simply aren't many left to move.

There is no question where the big growth lies-- in the suburbs. More whites than ever are moving to these neighborhoods and are being joined by a growing volume of Negroes.

Population movements already have caused the Census Bureau to alter its predictions on numbers of representatives in Congress that some states will be entitled to after this year's head count.

Moving remains a prime way in which Americans seek to better their jobs, incomes and surroundings. The official estimates show that the people who tend to pull up stakes are young adults especially those recently married, persons without jobs, and those with incomes between $3,000 and $7,000 a year.

In short, the ease with which Americans can move is one evidence that this is still a "land of opportunity."

But we believe that most Americans will realize that the opportunities are available in their own communities – if they want to find it – and there should be increasing stability in the Mo-Kan area for those who want to work.

TELEVISION IN THE COURTROOM

If the exercise of justice is a public event, why not let television cameras into the courtroom? There are a flurry of rejoinders to that question: TV would make a circus out of the courts; judges, lawyers and witnesses would try to become "performers" under the klieg lights; it would encourage outbursts and grandstanding by radicals. Television, however, continues to seek a role as something other than merely an entertainment medium. And it keeps knocking on the courtroom door.

As for the courts, they have left little room for debate on this issue. Rule 53 of the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure bars television from all federal courts. In handing down its decision on the Billie Sol Estes case in 1965, the Supreme Court came within one vote of prohibiting television from all courts on constitutional grounds. Only two states, Texas and Colorado, allow cameras in the court.

The American Bar Association sums up what appears to be the legal world's majority view in its Canon 35. The Canon reads in part: "...the broadcasting or televising of court proceedings detract from the essential dignity of the proceedings, district participants and witnesses in giving testimony, and create misconceptions with respect thereto in the mind of the public and should not be permitted."

It will be interesting to keep that in mind when the National Educational Network launches a four- part documentary-- the entire six- hour trial of a Black Panther in Denver, Colo. -- on successive nights beginning (at 8:30 p.m. EST) on Monday, March 23. The film, "Trial: The City and County of Denver v. Lauren R. Watson," involves a charge of resisting and interfering with a police officer. It is believed to be the first examination of the judicial system through a detailed depiction of an entire trial. The shoe, in other words, is on the other foot.

NEW YORK (AP) — Things a columnist might never know if he didn't open his mail:

The United States is one of the safest of civilized countries in which to drive an automobile. It has an annual mortality rate of 54.4 per 100,000 registered motor cars compared with 67.9 for France, 80.2 for Italy, 85.4 for Japan and 126 for West Germany. Norway has the lowest— 53.4.

Whenever a new President moves into the White House, a baseball kept in the Hall of Fame at Cooperstown, N.Y., is taken to the nation's capital so his autograph can be added. The baseball is now regarded as priceless.

If you want your horoscope checked, your best bet is France. That country has 30,000 astrologers. If you want your psyche checked, come to New York City. Nearly 40 per cent of U.S. psychiatrists practice here.

Our people, whose unofficial motto once was, "take a chance," are getting more cautious. Well, anyway, more than 63.4 million Americans are now covered by some form of disability insurance.

All it would take to wipe out the U.S. national debt would be for every man, woman and child to sit down and write a check for $2,000 to Uncle Sam. The only trouble with carrying out this simple solution is—most of the checks would bounce.

Looking ahead: A British medical journal estimates that if promising new drugs can be developed to slow the aging process, within the next decade 10 to 15 more productive years can be added to man's life span. One problem: at present two ut of three elderly people suffer from chronic disease.

Lady, do you have bags under your eyes? Here's an old remedy: grate a large raw potato, put the grated material in the folds of a handkerchief. Then lie down for half an hour while holding the potato-and-linen sandwich to your eyes. When you rise they should sparkle like those of Sophia Loren.

Good news: An increasing number of business firms have adopted zjßnb)own programs to fight alcoholism, which afflicts some 6½ million Americans. Some of the firms report a recovery rate of 60 to 70 per cent among alcoholic employes who cooperate with the program.

The good earth: You don't have to live on a farm or in the suburbs to raise a crop. More than four million U.S. city dwellers now have indoor gardens or outdoor gardens on patios and rooftops.

Where the money goes: A decade ago the average white collar worker paid out 27 per cent of his income in direct taxes. Today the figure is 34 per cent.

Worth remembering: "What we have, let us be thankful for; what we haven't got, let us hope would make us miserable if we had it; when you can't have, abuse."

Contrary to popular opinion, the need for reading or distantvision glasses rarely causes headaches.

If you don't like to invest in stamps as a hedge against inflation, you might collect sea shells. Some of them are quite valuable. An Austrian emperor once paid $20,000 for a wentletrap, one of the rarest and most precious shells.

It was Mark Twain's mother who told him, "Never learn to do anything. If you don't learn, you'll always find someone else to do it for you."

U.S. Savings Bonds are synonymous with indestructibility. If you lose yours, no matter how odd the circumstances, you can get a replacement at no cost from the Treasury. Take the situation of a boy in a rural community who went out to the mailbox to get the mail. On the way back to the house, the wind blew an envelope containing a Savings Bond into the path of a rotary lawn mower. Bond and envelope were shredded. The Bond was replaced.

* * *

The "indestructibility" of U.S. Savings Bonds also crosses international boundaries. One person took a $1,000 Bond with him to Cuba, in 1961. Since Government regulations made it illegal for him to hold the Bond, he buried it in the ground. When he left Cuba, he could not bring the Bond back. The Treasury deemed it unrecoverable and a new Bond was issued.

WIVES SEEK AID FOR P.O.W.'S

At Christman time, the press gave considerable attention to two members of the far-left Women's Strike for Peace who went to Hanoi and there met a few U.S. soldiers who were communist prisoners. But very little publicity was given to four wives of U.S. pilots missing in action who travelled to ten world capitols at almost the same time, seeking help for our prisoners of war.

The four wives were Mrs. Patricia Mearns, Mrs. Constance Hestle, Mrs. Carole Hanson, and Mrs. Patricia Hardy, all from California. They visited Rome, Cairo, Moscow, New Delhi, Bangkok, Vientiane, Saigon, Hong Kong, and Tokyo to seek support for their cause.

In Saigon they spent over three hours with General Creighton Abrams, who told them: "You are great Americans, great wives and great women. I shall never forget you."

They also visited communist soldiers held prisoner by our troops and found them to be "well fed and even caring for pet dogs in their prison compound." This is very different from communist treatment of our soldiers, as described by escaped prisoners.

By contrast, Robert Dornan, Los Angeles television personality who accompanied the wives, said of the "Strike for Peace" women: "The two American leftist women were never out of the sight of their communist hostess and never visited a POW camp, yet when they came back to America the local press picked up the communist propaganda photos given them by these women..." Every possible encouragement should be given to the courageous efforts of these four wives. They should become much more widely known. HLH

Washington Merry - Go - Round

By Jack Anderson

WASHINGTON--President Nixon, after deeply pondering how to keep his pledge to end the draft, has indicated to intimates that the happy day will have to be postponed.

His military advisers have warned that the armed forces can't possibly be maintained at the present three-million-man level without conscription.

Even if the armed services could get along with a million less men, the Pentagon estimates it would cost a budget-busting $4 billion a year to change over to an all-volunteer force. The money would be needed for higher pay, better housing, more fringe benefits and other incentives to attract volunteers.

Yet the Pentagon has wasted stupendous sums training men for duties that they abandon as fast as their enlistments run out. Only one out of every six enlisted men sign up for a second hitch.

MILITARY DROPOUTS

The loss is even more costly among men with special skills. It costs the taxpayers thousands, for example, to train a pilot. Yet one in three Air Force pilots and two in three Navy pilots drop out. Even among Annapolis graduates, only two in three stay in the service.

Those who reamin in uniform also are inclined to be the more mediocre men who prefer the security of the services to the uncertainty of the civilian world.

The President would like to reduce the draft gradually and to improve the quality of the military services by increasing their appeal. He has asked Secretary of Defense Mel Laird to prepare new programs that will encourage men to re-enlist.

Laird is ready to offer up to 10,000 new family housing units, educational opportunities for servicemen who would like to study, and various financial inducements. He is even willing to abolish KP and hire civilians to do the hated kitchen work.

It remains to be seen whether better housing and dreams of no KP will attract enough volunteers to fill the military quotas. But no one in the Wite House expects an early end to the draft.

MURPHY'S TAXES

Senator George Murphy, R-Calif., who accepts a $20,000-a-year consultant's fee and other financial rewards from Technicolor, Inc., apparently has been tardy with his taxes on this extra income.

A high official informed this column that Murphy usually is short $3,000 or $4,000 on his income tax payments each year and that the Internal Revenue Service has trouble collecting. In 1968, IRS was forced to file a $3,218.29 tax lien against him.

Murphy told us that he had been late in paying his taxes only twice and that the tax lien had been slapped on him while he was trying to sell securities to meet his tax obligation. He accused IRS of bringing the action to cause him political embarrassment.

Note: Technicolor, incidentally, is under indictment in Connecticut on 11 counts of mail fraud in what insiders describe as one of the biggest postal fraud cases in history.

Sen. Murphy, who sits on the company's board of directors, said the case came up at a board meeting. Beyond that, he claimed no knowledge of it.

The government alleges that Technicolor, its distributing companies and salesmen swindled about 900 Connecticut residents out of $250,000 to $500,000 by misrepresenting the value of home movie equipment being sold in a mail-order package deal. The investigation covered eight states, which indicates that the alleged fraud was nationwide. An outside possibility exists that the case will be tried before the June 2 California primary. Warren Christopher, a deputy Attorney General in the Johnson administration, has gone to work for the California law firm which represents Technicolor. He is not working on the mail fraud case, however.

PECKING ORDER

Just as observers carefully watch how Soviet leaders line up in the reviewing stand each May Day for clues to the power alignment in the Kremlin, the Congressional Directory has always been a guide to who's "in" with the President. The latest editon, therefore, caused a stir in the backrooms.

President Nixon's pied piper, Pat Moynihan, was moved up from seventh to second place in the pecking order. More than a dozen White House aides were dropped out of the Congressional Directory entirely. Among them were Harry Dent, the President's Southern strategist; Pat Buchanan, the speech writer who prepared Vice President Agenw's attack upon the TV networks; Clark Mollenhoff, the President's trouble-shooter; and Harry Flemming, the White House patronage czar.

The new listing was prepared by press secretary Ron Ziegler under the supervision of Bob Haldeman and John Ehrlichman, the two Prussian nobs who run theWhite House staff. A spokesman insisted to this column, however, that there was no special significance to the Congressional Directory changes.

MAIL STRIKE RADICALS

The nation's 1,300 postal inspectors have been alerted to check on attempts by militant young radicals to exploit the mail strike to advance their revolutionary goals.

The Post Offic's Inspector General, William J. Cotter, discounted reports, however, that the radicals were partially responsible for starting the New York walkout.

Cotter said he had received a few scattered reports of agitation by young militants, but said they appeared to have no significant effect.

Inside Labor

By Victor Riesel

Inside the White House: why President Nixon took the troop gamble.

New York -- Those of us who have had a few private minutes with President Nixon recently know that he has had it up to here – right up to the throat. Many a union, especially the rank and file, have been going for his jugular.

These men and women are out of control. Their leadership has lost them. They're split. They're making deals within deals, moving on wheels within wheels in the congress.

So President Nixon late last week decided not to back away from this postal crisis – especially that bellowing, stomping, screaming, howling rank-and-file mob meetings at one of which Brooklyn's Letter Carriers Union (Branch 41) President Jack Leventhal roared, "Ours is the most powerful union in the U.S."

The President knows his labor history. He knows what it means to call in troops. But last Friday and Saturday he decided that American labor would not be Europeanized.

Again and again he told some of his close aides that he did not want a France in the U.S. He did not want a French-like endless chain of two-and three-day stoppages (and sometimes longer) of federal employes in military and naval installations (where many workers, of course, are civilian as well as federal employes).

Mr. Nixon is aware that within a week or so the nation faces over-the-road trucking and railroad paralysis. He knew, as he made his decision, that the mercurial professional Air Traffic Controllers Orgainzation had been pressuring Transportation Secretary John Volpe.

During these private discussions, Labor Secretary Shultz said to the President that "the only thing worse than a wildcat strike is a successful wildcat strike."

The dignity of the U.S. was at stake. The laws of the U.S. were in jeopardy. The federal courts were being defied by postal wildcatters in terms as lewd as any used by The Rat, The Village Other, and literateurs whose manuscripts are toilet walls.

What alternative did Richard Nixon have to the declaration of a national emergency?Let's talk bluntly. There always are the inside stories behind the public reports. The President and Mr. Schultz did not contact AFL-CIO President George Meany, except to have Assistant Secretary of Labor Bill Usery send work over the weekend that the President meant what he said about using the Army -- and would not be fazed by danger of a national labor stoppage.

This was no slight. This was indeed to avoid embarrassing Mr. Meany – who, powerful though he is, really has no control over the 14 feuding national postal unions. Some of them are in the AFL-CIO. Some are not. Some agree on the creation of a postal corporation. Some don't.

Some had been pressuring congressmen, warning of the creation of a $10 million or a $4 million political war chest to defeat those who crossed them. And there is an election this fall, after all.

Congressmen got whipsawed. There even is a feud between some postal unions and the national AFL-CIO Union. There is adeep split inside the National Association of Letter Carriers (AFL-CIO). Most rank and file does not want a postal corporation. It would rather bargain with an election-conscious Congress for wages.

Privately their national president, the feverish, shaken, fatigued, $30,000-a-year James Rademacher – whom even other national union presidents don't really know – was for a postal corporation.

So he whipped up the story of SDS infiltration. There is no such. He dredged this one up from the fact that when last July some 80 letter carriers at the Bronx Kingsbridge Post Office Station went on a sick-in, some SDS cells called on the workers and peasants to come to a meeting or two. Few came.

Then Mr. Rademacher charged that the New York locals were infiltrated. There are those who believe that Mr. Rademacher was seeing neo-leftists behind every bogged down mail bag because the New York Letter Carriers are anti-Rademacher. He had lost control.

So when he couldn't lick them, he joined them. He said he'd call for a national strike. Well, some listened. Some didn't. Then he said he'd ask George Meany to call a national general strike of some 14 million workers. Fact is that he has not been talking with Mr. Meany and it would be quite a trick to paralyze the nation even if Mr. Meany recognized Mr. Rademacher's voice on the phone.

Someone had to take leadership. Land, air and train paralysis are threatened on other labor fronts. There have been threats of municipal general strikes – in San Francisco, Atlanta and other cities. There seems to be no satisfying the rank and file. So Richard Nixon decided that the majesty of the U.S. government -- jeered at, howled at, blackened in the streets, harassed, besieged, and bombed – would take the leadership.

He decided the time had come to move. And this -- as the dean of labor conciliators and presidential advisers, David Cole, said – is the turning point.

"There must be some way to settle federal, state, county and municipal strikes," said Mr. Cole as he heard the President's emergency broadcast. "We have used Congress, commissions, fact-finding boards, civil service edicts and other patchwork.

"The President's speech is a turning point. What is the government going to do to preserve its long-established policy of resolving wage and other disputes without permitting strikes?

Well, for the first time in recent history a "peacetime" President has used troops to break a strike.

He had no alternative. He'll have none until reason returns to the rank and file.

They must learn they can't get everything they demand every time they demand it. They must learn that the fighter who hasn't lost one never fought one.

They must learn there is a public and government and authorities sworn to uphold law.

Son, 16, Spends Evenings With Young Divorcee...Mother A Bit Concerned

Dear Ann Landers: It started when our 16-year-old boy began to shovel snow for this young divorcee who lives in the next block. He gets paid for it. The woman is ten or twelve years older than Donnie. She has two small children.

She moved here about a year ago and seems to be a nice person. Am I foolish to be upset by the boy spending one or two evenings a week in this woman's home? He always tells me when he is going and so far I have not let him know it bothers me. The boy is very honest.

Why doesn't the woman find company her own age? My Donnie is a healthy, normal boy and I wouldn't be surprised if he was sowing a few wild oats over there. Please tell me how to handle this. — Lansing Mother

Dear Mother: Don't panic. The next time Donnie tells you he is going to visit hte woman sit him down for a low-key chat. Let him know he is playing with dynamite but don't threaten, preach or prohibit. If you keep your cool he will probably keep his.

Dear Ann Landers: My best friend was buried yesterday. She was a sophomore, 15, years old. B had pneumonia. It isn't supposed to be fatal anymore — but killed her just the same.

B was a great girl, full of fun and everyone liked her. She had a way of getting along with people, no matter who. The boys flocked around three at a time. She has her pick of the crowd.

B's parents were very strict. They allowed her only one date a week and the boy had to "pass inspection." If B went out Friday she couldn't go out Saturday, Her mother used to say, "You have plenty of time."

B wanted to go to New York for five days during the Christman holidays. She had saved her baby-sitting money and two of her cousins had permission to go. (They were 16 and 17.) B's mother said, "Not this year. You have plenty of time."

Who knows how much time any of us have, Ann? Please print this letter for other mothers who are making the same mistake. — B's Friend

Dear Friend: What a tragedy that your friend's life ended so soon, but her mother did not make a mistake. She was a wise mother. People who feel they must do everything now because tomorrow may never come invariably regret it. This is a poor philosophy, — a fool's excuse and a trap for the impatient.

Dear Ann Landers: The woman who signed herself: "Tiger's Mistress" scored a bullseye. It's my husband she was writing about and she can have him. I've packed his clothes, begged him to leave and even locked him out of the house, but he tells me he can't live without me and the kids and I just have to put up with him until he gets the foolishness out of his system.

I must be as nuts as he is because I love the guy and I'm willing to stand by. Since you printed her letter to me I hope you'll print mine to her. — Tiger's Wife

Dear Wife: I have two dozen letters on my desk from other wives who are sure the letter was intended for THEM. Don't fight, girls. He isn't worth it!

What awaits you on the other side of the marriage veil; How can you be sure your marriage will work? Read Ann Landers' booklet "Marriage — What To Expect." Send your request to Ann Landers in care of your newspaper enclosing 50 cents in coin and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Maravich Deal Richest Ever for Collegian

ATLANTA (AP) — Pistol Pete Maravich, the brilliant basketball magician who says he's "always going to be out to entertain," has signed a fiveyear contract with the Atlanta Hawks of the National Basketball Association calling for a reported $1.9 million.

Maravich, major college basketball's all-time scoring king with 3,667 points in his threeyear career at Louisiana State University, quickly came to terms with the Hawks who chose him in the NBA draft Monday.

"I wanted to play somewhere in the South," said Maravich, who turned down a reported $2 million offer from the Carolina Cougars of the American Basketball Association to play in the older NBA.

Terms of the contract were not disclosed except that it was for five years. Reliable sources placed the amount at $1.9 million, the most ever payed a college athlete turning professional.

"I'm very pleased," said Maravich, a three-time AllAmerican whose trademark became his floppy hair and sagging socks.

LSU Coach Press Maravich, Pete's father, sat beside his son as Lester E. Zittrain, one of two Pennsylvania attorneys who handled all negotiations for the 1970 College Player of the Year, announced that Maravich had signed.

However, no one wanted to discuss the contract terms.

"Let's just say it's a contract that is fair ... one that very handsomely compenstates the greatest basketball player in the world," said Zittrain.

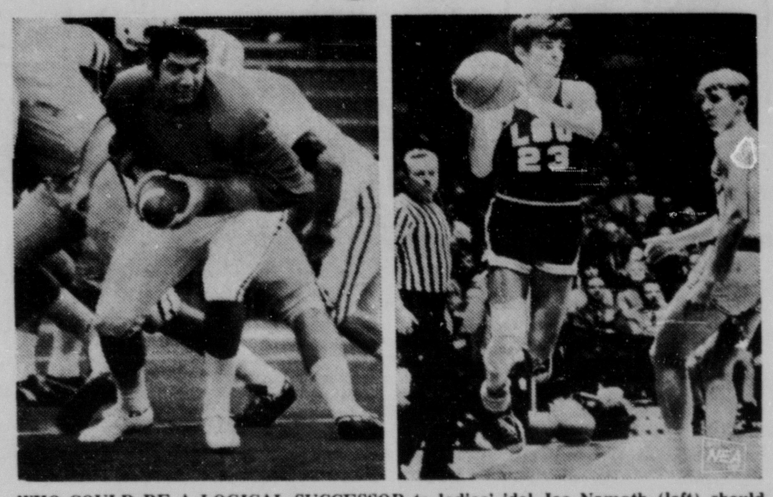
"He's going to have to be awfully good not to be the highest paid substitute in the game," said Thomas G. Cousins, the coowner of the Hawks who personally negotiated the Maravich contract.

"However, I have no concern that he will fit in with the team like a charm," Cousins said.

The Hawks are hopeful Maravich will continue to lure sellout crowds. His father said he played before 820,000 persons during his four years at LSU.

Maravich, his saucer-sized brown eyes gleaming, often tells interviewers, "Maybe I'm a little kookie, but I'm always going to be out to entertain. There's nothing that says you can't win and be entertaining."

Maravich thrilled Dixie crowds more with his behindthe-back passes and between-theleg fancy dribbling than with his prolific scoring. He averaged 44.2 points in 83 games for the LSU varsity and had a single game high of 69 points earlier this year against Alabama.



WHO COULD BE A LOGICAL SUCCESSOR to ladies' idol Joe Namath (left) should he depart the pro sports scene? Likely candidate—Pistol Pete Maravich (right), the charismatic LSU basketballer.

Maravich became the sixth first-round draft choice signed by the NBA since Monday's draft. The others are Dave Cowens of Florida State with the Boston Celtics, Al Henry of Wisconsin with the Philadelphia 76ers, Bob Lanier of St. Bonaventure with the Detroit Pistons, Rudy Tomjanovich of Michigan with San Diego and George Johnson of Stephen F. Austin with Baltimore.

The ABA has signed five of its No. 1 selections—Rick Mount of Purdue by Indiana, Dan Issel of Kentucky by Kentucky, Mike Maloy of Davidson by Pittsburgh, Charlie Scott of North Carolina by Washington and Bobby Croft of Tennessee, drafted first by Dallas but signed by Kentucky. All but Croft were signed before the NBA draft.

Cowens signed Thursday for a reported $270,000 and Henry signed for a "six figures" contract.

The Los Angeles Stars of the ABA signed their No. 8 draft choice, two-time Little All-American Kevin Wilson of Ashland College, Thursday night. Contract terms were not disclosed.

Knicks Nudge Bullets In Double Overtime

NEW YORK (AP) — The New York Knicks and Baltimore Bullets, sky-high for the playoff pressure cooker, prompted a flood of superlatives from Walt Frazier.

"It was one of the guttiest games I've ever been in ... it was ... well, it was a heck of a game," the Knicks' blue chip guard said Thursday night after New York trimmed Baltimore 120-117 in a double overtime National Basketball Association playoff game.

The victory gave the Knicks a 1-0 advantage in the best-of-7 Eastern Division semifinal series which resumes tonight in Baltimore. Milwaukee, which holds a 1-0 edge on Philadelphia, plays the 76ers in Madison, Wis., in another Eastern semifinal contest.

Frazier said he felt sluggish during regulation time, but made two steals from Earl "The Pearl" Monroe in the overtime sessions to key the victory.

Frazier's steals appeared to fit into the scheme of the contest that had more turns than a Hollywood script.

Consider:

—Monroe, who had a gamehigh 39 points, missed a jumper in the final seconds of regulation time.

—Frazier knocked the ball from Monroe's hands to Dick Barnett, who raced the length of the court and missed the winning bucket at the end of the first overtime.

—Willis Reed, who missed two clutch shots and a free throw in the first extra period, turned from goat to hero with the winning basket with 33 seconds left in the second overtime.

Monroe's extraordinary jump shooting and the vibrant play of ice-cool rookie Fred Carter kept the Bullets eye-to-eye with the Knicks throughout. Carter wound up with 21 points and was a defensive marvel.

The contest was faintly reminiscent of past events. Last year, Baltimore won the Eastern Division crown and was knocked off by the third-place Knicks in four straight.

The Bullets almost pulled a turnabout this time.

Six-Figure Signings Lend 'ro Hue to All-Star Duel

Associated Press Sports Writer

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind. (AP) The college basketball coaches' annual East-West All-Star game will have a heavy professional flavor Saturday at Butler University's Hinkle Fieldhouse.

Rick Mount of Purdue, the first player named to play in the game this year, also was out in front in the fast break for two contracts that followed the end of the college season. He signed with the Indiana Pacers of the American Basketball Association March 9.

Other all-stars who already have turned pro include Mount's fellow All-American Dan Issel of Kentucky, Charlie Scott of North Carolina, Mike Maloy of Davidson and Rudy Tomjanovich of Michigan. All will join Mount on the East team.

West stars include Sam Lacey and Jimmy Collins of New Mexico State, Jim Ard of Cincinnati, Garfield Heard of Oklahoma and Rick Erickson of Washington.

The game, sponsored by the National Association of Basketball Coaches and the Indianapolis Star, will be televised nationally by the Hughes Sports Network. It starts at 2 p.m. EST.

This will be Mount's second appearance in the East-West series, which the East leads 4-3. As a sophomore, he had 24 points to lead all scorers, but Pete Maravich of LSU was named the game's outstanding player.

Sophomores and juniors were eligible for the game two years ago because it was used as part of the trials to select the U. S. Olympic basketball team.

Maravich declined an invitation to play this year.

Two retired coaching greats, Nat Holman of City College of New York and Bud Foster of Wisconsin, will make brief comebacks Saturday. Holman is the East coach, Foster the West coach.

Young Pilot Hurlers Shine as Seattle Franchise Hopes Fade

Associated Press Sports Writer

While Seattle's flak-riddled baseball flagship tries to avert a crash landing in Milwaukee, a couple of young Pilots are earning their wings on the ground.

The Pilots, apparently headed for a franchise shift to Milwaukee before their April 7 season opener, shaded the Cleveland Indians 2-1 Thursday in exhibition play behind the three-hit pitching of Marty Pattin and John Gelnar.

Pattin worked seven strong innings and Gelnar blanked the Indians the rest of the way at Tempe, Ariz., as the Pilots brought their spring record to 8-10.

At nearby Phoenix, meanwhile, Commissioner Bowie Kuhn conceded that Seattle's chances of keeping the franchise appear dim, despite temporary restraining orders, obtained by the city and state of Washington, against movement of the team.

The American League is expected to approve transfer and sale of the year-old expansion club for $10.8 million within the next week.

Mike Hegan's run-scoring single in the seventh inning broke a 1-1 tie and carried the Pilots past Cleveland in one of only five games played Thursday.

The Chicago Cubs blasted Oakland 9-2 at Scottsdale, Ariz.; California downed San Diego 6-3 at Palm Springs, Calif.; San Francisco beat the Nagoya Chunichi Dragons 5-0 in Japan and Baltimore shipped Washington 8-2 at Miami, Fla. Seven other Florida games were washed out because of rain or wet grounds.

Ron Santo drove in three runs with a single and his third spring homer and Johnny Callison drilled a two-run triple, leading the Cubs' assault on Oakland ace John "Blue Moon" Odom.

The Angels ended San Diego's winning streak at five games behind a 10-hit spree. Bill Voss led the way, poking a double and two singles for a .400 exhibition average.

Frank Reberger and Rich Robertson combined for a three-hit shutout in the Giants' victory, which gave them a 3-4 record on their Japanese tour.

The Orioles rocked Dick Bosman for nine hits and all their runs in the second and third innings, then breezed behind the full-route pitching of Mike Cuellar. Cuellar, first Baltimore hurler to go nine innings, scattered eight hits and socked a two-run double.

Fundamental First-Last Word of a Wooden Team

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The coaching philosophy of John Wooden is couched in old-fashioned homily.

To some it might sound "square." To others, unsophisticated.

But with it, John Wooden has brought UCLA four consecutive national collegiate basketball titles, six in the last seven years and in 22 years of tutoring basketball teams at Westwood, has never had a losing season.

The key words in the philosophy of Wooden are probably "fundamentals," "hard work," and "teamwork." To these ends, he drills his players in almost rote-like fashion for the first six weeks of practice. Before the Bruins take the court against an opponent, they rarely see a basketball and when they do it's to drill on fundamentals.

No matter how many all-city or all-state high school or junior college stars he has on his squad. The first and last word of a Wooden team is fundamental.

"When the players come out for the team, I tell them they may not be the best team in the country but they'll be the best conditioned team in the country," says the 59-year-old former English teacher.

"When the season starts, I want the players to have the confidence that they can do everything they have to fundamentally correct. And I want them to know they are the bestconditioned players on the court. It gives them a positive mental attitude and I always want my players playing positive basketball."

As for teamwork, Wooden doesn't use the word. But he does tell the players where their best shots are. And when they are.

Six-foot-eight center Steve Patterson says Wooden "never asked us to subordinate ourselves. But when we came down court in practice, if we took a shot we shouldn't have, coach will say, 'That's not your shot,' and we'd know we'd better not take it the next time.

"And if we came down court and had a good shot and didn't take it, he'd tell us 'That's your shot.'"

That slow-and easy approach to the game is backed with a rigorous training program that Wooden follows as gospel.

Each day, he walks out to practice sessions with a small index card. On that card are the type of drills that will be run that afternoon, along with the time he plans to spend on each. He doesn't vary from that schedule, which he has planned in the quiet of his office.

Asked what his reaction is to comments his team is already being chosen to win next year's championship, Wooden says: "I don't mind at all. I'd like to have other teams go out on the court knowing we're the best. The pressure is on them."

He doesn't scout opponents very much — "I worry about what we do, I don't worry about what the other team does" — and emphasizes that winning is only part of the game.

So concerned is he about his players, he constantly refers to those whose character was improved by the game. Sometimes, after talking with Wooden, one gets the impression he'd rather lose a championship game than lose the respect of his players.

But he's a tenacious battler on the court.

Discipline is his byword and if a player steps out of line — regardless of who he is — Wooden doesn't hesitate in disciplining.

"When I pulled Sidney Wicks out of our second game with USC," Wooden said, "he didn't like it very much. He was upset with me and understandably so. But when I sent him back in, he really played a game. Now, that type of discipline might not work with another player.

"That means you really have to know your players. I think I have a reasonably close relationship with our players. We may not always agree on the way to do things, but we understand each other."

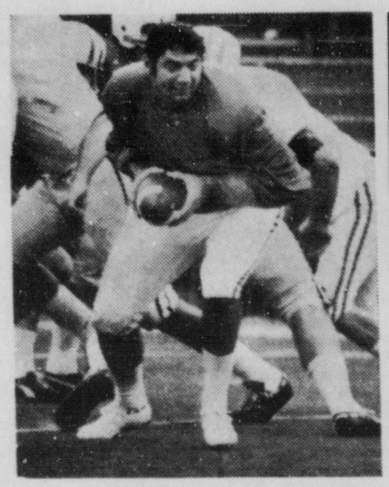
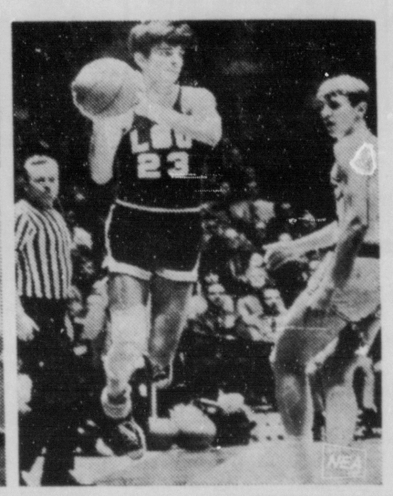
Maravich Deal Richest Ever for Collegian





WHO COULD BE A LOGICAL SUCCESSOR to ladies' idol Joe Namath (left) should he depart the pro sports scene? Likely candidate—Pistol Pete Maravich (right), the charismatic LSU basketballer.

ATLANTA (AP) — Pistol Pete Maravich, the brilliant basketball magician who says he's "always going to be out to entertain," has signed a fiveyear contract with the Atlanta Hawks of the National Basketball Association calling for a reported $1.9 million.

Maravich, major college basketball's all-time scoring king with 3,667 points in his threeyear career at Louisiana State University, quickly came to terms with the Hawks who chose him in the NBA draft Monday.

"I wanted to play somewhere in the South," said Maravich, who turned down a reported $2 million offer from the Carolina Cougars of the American Basketball Association to play in the older NBA.

Terms of the contract were not disclosed except that it was for five years. Reliable sources placed the amount at $1.9 million, the most ever payed a college athlete turning professional.

"I'm very pleased," said Maravich, a three-time AllAmerican whose trademark became his floppy hair and sagging socks.

LSU Coach Press Maravich, Pete's father, sat beside his son as Lester E. Zittrain, one of two Pennsylvania attorneys who handled all negotiations for the 1970 College Player of the Year, announced that Maravich had signed.

However, no one wanted to discuss the contract terms.

"Let's just say it's a contract that is fair ... one that very handsomely compenstates the greatest basketball player in the world," said Zittrain.

"He's going to have to be awfully good not to be the highest paid substitute in the game," said Thomas G. Cousins, the coowner of the Hawks who personally negotiated the Maravich contract.

"However, I have no concern that he will fit in with the team like a charm," Cousins said.

The Hawks are hopeful Maravich will continue to lure sellout crowds. His father said he played before 820,000 persons during his four years at LSU.

Maravich, his saucer-sized brown eyes gleaming, often tells interviewers, "Maybe I'm a little kookie, but I'm always going to be out to entertain. There's nothing that says you can't win and be entertaining."

Maravich thrilled Dixie crowds more with his behindthe-back passes and between-theleg fancy dribbling than with his prolific scoring. He averaged 44.2 points in 83 games for the LSU varsity and had a single game high of 69 points earlier this year against Alabama.

The Los Angeles Stars of the ABA signed their No. 8 draft choice, two-time Little All-American Kevin Wilson of Ashland College, Thursday night. Contract terms were not disclosed.

West stars include Sam Lacey and Jimmy Collins of New Mexico State, Jim Ard of Cincinnati, Garfield Heard of Oklahoma and Rick Erickson of Washington.

The game, sponsored by the National Association of Basketball Coaches and the Indianapolis Star, will be televised nationally by the Hughes Sports Network. It starts at 2 p.m. EST.

This will be Mount's second appearance in the East-West series, which the East leads 4-3. As a sophomore, he had 24 points to lead all scorers, but Pete Maravich of LSU was named the game's outstanding player.

Sophomores and juniors were eligible for the game two years ago because it was used as part of the trials to select the U. S. Olympic basketball team.

Maravich declined an invitation to play this year.

Two retired coaching greats, Nat Holman of City College of New York and Bud Foster of Wisconsin, will make brief comebacks Saturday. Holman is the East coach, Foster the West coach.

Specific Charges Filed In Orton Ouster Case

JEFFERSON CITY' MO.--Under order of the Missouri Supreme Court, Attorney General John C. Danforth filed Tuesday an amended information charging Sheriff Clyde Orton of Pemiscott County with specific instances of oppression in office and neglect of duty.

The ouster action against Orton was filed by the attorney general after a series of raids by law enforcement authorities in Pemiscot County and an investigation by The Globe-Democrat into alleged gambling and liquor law violations in southeast Missouri.

Eleven specific instances were set forth to support the allegation that the sheriff "unlawfully failed to execute (his official) duties from Jan. 1, 1957 to date..."

These charges include an instance in which the sheriff is alleged to have offered to allow a man named George McRad, being held on a first degree murder charge, to leave the county jail to purchase liquor in Hayti, Mo., and bring it back to the jail.

The sheriff is alleged to have threatened in September of 1969 to jail five Mississippi state liquor control agents if they did not leave Pemiscot County, where they were conducting an investigation into alleged transportation of liquor from Missouri into Mississippi.

Orton is also alleged to have refused assistance in July of 1969 to two Florence, Ala., police officers when they asked his assistance in stopping transportation of liquor from Pemiscot County of Alabama.

The attorney general charged that Orton allowed dice and card games to be openly conducted at bars in Hayti and Caruthersville.

Several instances of alleged "wilful and malicious oppression, partiality, misconduct and abuse of authority" were listed in one section of the information.

These included alleged unlawful release of prisoners from the county jail in January of 1960, and an alleged request made by the sheriff in May of 1967 to a man named Johnny Forman, on parole from a first degree murder conviction, to purchase liquor in Hayti and bring it back to the county jail.

The attorney general alleged that during 1963 and 1964, Orton telephoned bets on horse races "for himself and others" and a deputy sheriff placed bets for him.

Orton was also alleged to have offered during 1964 to produce witnesses in a rape case "who would testify to anything he told them."

The petition renewed the plea that Orton be ordered to appear and show cause why he should not be ousted from the office of sheriff.

The Supreme Court had given Danforth 15 days to make more definite and certain allegations in the case.

In the March 9 order, the court also refused to order Danforth and Harry Wiggins, supervisor of liquor control, to stop talking to the press about the case. The court also refused to hear the case en banc.

Engineer Honored for His Work in India

COLUMBIA--Although now leading a retired life in Ohio, new honors still shower on Mason Vaugh, a native Missourian, in recognition of his 38 years of work in India as an agricultural engineer.

The department of agricultural engineering at the University of Allahabad in India is celebrating its Silver Jubilee this month. The event is in recognition of the years of agricultural engineering training at the institution, and the historic part played by Vaugh.

Also, the Indian Society of Agricultural Engineers will publish a special journal highlighting Vaugh's contribution to agricultural engineering education in India.

Like any developing country, agriculture has been the backbone of India's economy a long time. And, stepping up food production to feed the hungry through improved scientific practices is of paramount importance. Education in agricultural engineering is helping increase production.

One way is by providing Indian farmers with improved equipment. It is in this area Vaugh contributed much to Indian agriculture.

The story of Mason Vaugh actually begins about 75 years ago in Missouri. On June 27, 1894, he was born at Bonne Terre.

He displayed an early aptitude for scholarship. The record shows he was valedictorian of his grammar school graduating class. He earned the same honor at high school graduation time.

He enrolled in agriculture at the University of Missouri-Columbia but left in 1917 to join the Army. However, he was granted a B.S. degree in agriculture in 1919, the same year he finished military service.

He worked for an agricultural implement company. After six months he was offered a permanent position as salesman. He declined. Instead, Vaugh returned to UMC as an agricultural engineering student.

In 1921 he was granted the B.S. degree in agricultural engineering. According to department files, Vaugh was the second University of Missouri-Columbia agricultural engineering graduate.

The agricultural engineer headed for New York. There he worked in the offices of the Board of Foreign Missions of the Presbyterian Church. It was there he was perhaps filled with a desire to help less fortunate people of the world. Maybe, too, the young man was struck with a spirit of adventure. In any event, he was off to India as a missionary in 1921.

He joined Allahabad Agricultural Institute. Need was felt for a school designed to benefit agricultural production. Logically, Vaugh, the only person available with engineering expertise in agriculture, put his talents to work. He quickly laid the groundwork for an agricultural engineering workshop. Immediate problems were the first concern in his workshop.

In 1928, the training was offered to students in agricultural engineering on three-year apprenticeship basis. Enrollment was limited to 10 students. They were trained in maintaining and repairing agricultural implements, engine driving, carpentry, and bricklaying.

The main emphasis was on training in simple and practical mechanization for the small farmer--designing simple tools and equipment, small hand tools, pumps, and bullock-drawn farm implements. As a result of this work, Vaugh wrote a number of technical papers on farm mechanization for small landholders in India.

Through his efforts, which called for diplomacy and tact, Vaugh secured the cooperation of state and central government. That cooperation resulted in substantial financial grants to establish a Bachelor of Science course at Allahabad Agricultural Institute. Grants also provided for facilities to improve land for cultivation, including construction of tube wells.

An implement factory, in the name of "Agricultural Development Society," was established by Vaugh. It is still meeting needs of Indian farmers by producing equipment based on his reasearch.

What began as an apprenticeship in agricultural engineering, became a two-year, three-year, then four-year course of study. In July, 1964 , a Master's degree program in agricultural engineering was launched at the University of Allahabad.

At the time of mandatory retirement at Allahabad University, Vaugh's services were regarded as indispensable. He remained to conduct seminars and serve on academic committees.

Vaugh, called the father of agricultural engineering in India, has served that government as advisor on agricultural engineering and sat on numerous committees.

He is remembered in India for many things--research in rural housing, aspects of village sanitation, and kitchens. His notes on farm machinery, farm power, farm buildings, and workshop are considered standard literature by agricultural engineers all over the country.

His efforts have resulted in many honors including honorary life membership in the American Society of Agricultural Engineers. He received a University of Missouri-Columbia Honor Award for Distinguished Service in Engineering in 1959.

Vaugh has more than a professional side. He and his wife performed missionary work with zeal. Their efforts resulted in establishing the Naini Community Church. Funds they raised helped construct a church building.

The Vaughs provided scholarships for Indian children. Mrs. Vaugh helped village women establish a flourishing basket industry.

Mason Vaugh formally retired June 30, 1959. He lives at 433 Bloomington Ave., Wooster, Ohio 44691.

The term "Mach 1" designates the speed of an airplane flying at the speed of sound. When flying twice the speed of sound, the term "Mach 2" is used. The prefix Mach comes from the name of Ernst Mach, a Czech-born German physicist, who contributed to the study of sound, says The World Almanac. The speed of sound is usually placed at 1' feet per second at sea ... at 32 degrees Fahrenheit.

Maravich Deal Richest Ever for Collegian

ATLANTA (AP) — Pistol Pete Maravich, the brilliant basketball magician who says he's "always going to be out to entertain," has signed a fiveyear contract with the Atlanta Hawks of the National Basketball Association calling for a reported $1.9 million.

Maravich, major college basketball's all-time scoring king with 3,667 points in his threeyear career at Louisiana State University, quickly came to terms with the Hawks who chose him in the NBA draft Monday.

"I wanted to play somewhere in the South," said Maravich, who turned down a reported $2 million offer from the Carolina Cougars of the American Basketball Association to play in the older NBA.

Terms of the contract were not disclosed except that it was for five years. Reliable sources placed the amount at $1.9 million, the most ever payed a college athlete turning professional.

"I'm very pleased," said Maravich, a three-time AllAmerican whose trademark became his floppy hair and sagging socks.

LSU Coach Press Maravich, Pete's father, sat beside his son as Lester E. Zittrain, one of two Pennsylvania attorneys who handled all negotiations for the 1970 College Player of the Year, announced that Maravich had signed.

However, no one wanted to discuss the contract terms.

"Let's just say it's a contract that is fair ... one that very handsomely compenstates the greatest basketball player in the world," said Zittrain.

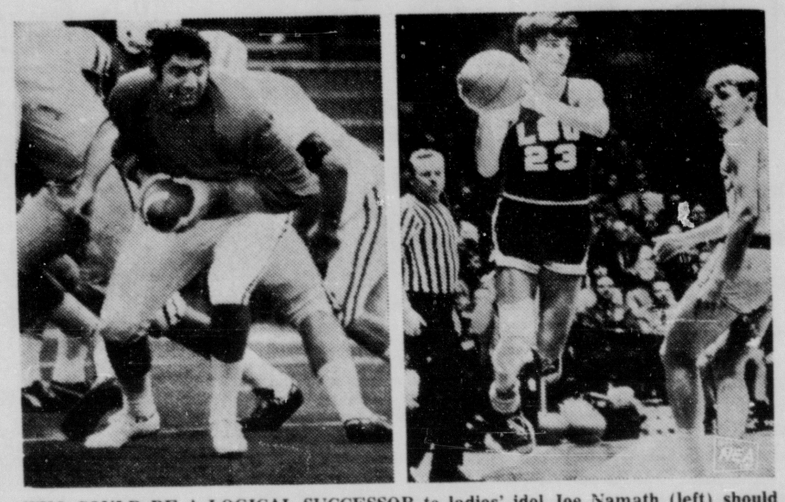
"He's going to have to be awfully good not to be the highest paid substitute in the game," said Thomas G. Cousins, the coowner of the Hawks who personally negotiated the Maravich contract.

"However, I have no concern that he will fit in with the team like a charm," Cousins said.

The Hawks are hopeful Maravich will continue to lure sellout crowds. His father said he played before 820,000 persons during his four years at LSU.

Maravich, his saucer-sized brown eyes gleaming, often tells interviewers, "Maybe I'm a little kookie, but I'm always going to be out to entertain. There's nothing that says you can't win and be entertaining."

Maravich thrilled Dixie crowds more with his behindthe-back passes and between-theleg fancy dribbling than with his prolific scoring. He averaged 44.2 points in 83 games for the LSU varsity and had a single game high of 69 points earlier this year against Alabama.



WHO COULD BE A LOGICAL SUCCESSOR to ladies' idol Joe Namath (left) should he depart the pro sports scene? Likely candidate—Pistol Pete Maravich (right), the charismatic LSU basketballer.

Maravich became the sixth first-round draft choice signed by the NBA since Monday's draft. The others are Dave Cowens of Florida State with the Boston Celtics, Al Henry of Wisconsin with the Philadelphia 76ers, Bob Lanier of St. Bonaventure with the Detroit Pistons, Rudy Tomjanovich of Michigan with San Diego and George Johnson of Stephen F. Austin with Baltimore.

The ABA has signed five of its No. 1 selections—Rick Mount of Purdue by Indiana, Dan Issel of Kentucky by Kentucky, Mike Maloy of Davidson by Pittsburgh, Charlie Scott of North Carolina by Washington and Bobby Croft of Tennessee, drafted first by Dallas but signed by Kentucky. All but Croft were signed before the NBA draft.

Cowens signed Thursday for a reported $270,000 and Henry signed for a "six figures" contract.

The Los Angeles Stars of the ABA signed their No. 8 draft choice, two-time Little All-American Kevin Wilson of Ashland College, Thursday night. Contract terms were not disclosed.

Knicks Nudge Bullets In Double Overtime

NEW YORK (AP) — The New York Knicks and Baltimore Bullets, sky-high for the playoff pressure cooker, prompted a flood of superlatives from Walt Frazier.

"It was one of the guttiest games I've ever been in ... it was ... well, it was a heck of a game," the Knicks' blue chip guard said Thursday night after New York trimmed Baltimore 120-117 in a double overtime National Basketball Association playoff game.

The victory gave the Knicks a 1-0 advantage in the best-of-7 Eastern Division semifinal series which resumes tonight in Baltimore. Milwaukee, which holds a 1-0 edge on Philadelphia, plays the 76ers in Madison, Wis., in another Eastern semifinal contest.

Frazier said he felt sluggish during regulation time, but made two steals from Earl "The Pearl" Monroe in the overtime sessions to key the victory.

Frazier's steals appeared to fit into the scheme of the contest that had more turns than a Hollywood script.

Consider:

—Monroe, who had a gamehigh 39 points, missed a jumper in the final seconds of regulation time.

—Frazier knocked the ball from Monroe's hands to Dick Barnett, who raced the length of the court and missed the winning bucket at the end of the first overtime.

—Willis Reed, who missed two clutch shots and a free throw in the first extra period, turned from goat to hero with the winning basket with 33 seconds left in the second overtime.

Monroe's extraordinary jump shooting and the vibrant play of ice-cool rookie Fred Carter kept the Bullets eye-to-eye with the Knicks throughout. Carter wound up with 21 points and was a defensive marvel.

The contest was faintly reminiscent of past events. Last year, Baltimore won the Eastern Division crown and was knocked off by the third-place Knicks in four straight.

The Bullets almost pulled a turnabout this time.

4 Six-Figure Signings Lend 'ro Hue to All-Star Duel

Associated Press Sports Writer

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind. (AP) The college basketball coaches' annual East-West All-Star game will have a heavy professional flavor Saturday at Butler University's Hinkle Fieldhouse.

Rick Mount of Purdue, the first player named to play in the game this year, also was out in front in the fast break for two contracts that followed the end of the college season. He signed with the Indiana Pacers of the American Basketball Association March 9.

Other all-stars who already have turned pro include Mount's fellow All-American Dan Issel of Kentucky, Charlie Scott of North Carolina, Mike Maloy of Davidson and Rudy Tomjanovich of Michigan. All will join Mount on the East team.

West stars include Sam Lacey and Jimmy Collins of New Mexico State, Jim Ard of Cincinnati, Garfield Heard of Oklahoma and Rick Erickson of Washington.

The game, sponsored by the National Association of Basketball Coaches and the Indianapolis Star, will be televised nationally by the Hughes Sports Network. It starts at 2 p.m. EST.

This will be Mount's second appearance in the East-West series, which the East leads 4-3. As a sophomore, he had 24 points to lead all scorers, but Pete Maravich of LSU was named the game's outstanding player.

Sophomores and juniors were eligible for the game two years ago because it was used as part of the trials to select the U. S. Olympic basketball team.

Maravich declined an invitation to play this year.

Two retired coaching greats, Nat Holman of City College of New York and Bud Foster of Wisconsin, will make brief comebacks Saturday. Holman is the East coach, Foster the West coach.

Young Pilot Hurlers Shine as Seattle Franchise Hopes Fade

Associated Press Sports Writer

While Seattle's flak-riddled baseball flagship tries to avert a crash landing in Milwaukee, a couple of young Pilots are earning their wings on the ground.

The Pilots, apparently headed for a franchise shift to Milwaukee before their April 7 season opener, shaded the Cleveland Indians 2-1 Thursday in exhibition play behind the three-hit pitching of Marty Pattin and John Gelnar.

Pattin worked seven strong innings and Gelnar blanked the Indians the rest of the way at Tempe, Ariz., as the Pilots brought their spring record to 8-10.

At nearby Phoenix, meanwhile, Commissioner Bowie Kuhn conceded that Seattle's chances of keeping the franchise appear dim, despite temporary restraining orders, obtained by the city and state of Washington, against movement of the team.

The American League is expected to approve transfer and sale of the year-old expansion club for $10.8 million within the next week.

Mike Hegan's run-scoring single in the seventh inning broke a 1-1 tie and carried the Pilots past Cleveland in one of only five games played Thursday.

The Chicago Cubs blasted Oakland 9-2 at Scottsdale, Ariz.; California downed San Diego 6-3 at Palm Springs, Calif.; San Francisco beat the Nagoya Chunichi Dragons 5-0 in Japan and Baltimore shipped Washington 8-2 at Miami, Fla. Seven other Florida games were washed out because of rain or wet grounds.

Ron Santo drove in three runs with a single and his third spring homer and Johnny Callison drilled a two-run triple, leading the Cubs' assault on Oakland ace John "Blue Moon" Odom.

The Angels ended San Diego's winning streak at five games behind a 10-hit spree. Bill Voss led the way, poking a double and two singles for a .400 exhibition average.

Frank Reberger and Rich Robertson combined for a three-hit shutout in the Giants' victory, which gave them a 3-4 record on their Japanese tour.

The Orioles rocked Dick Bosman for nine hits and all their runs in the second and third innings, then breezed behind the full-route pitching of Mike Cuellar. Cuellar, first Baltimore hurler to go nine innings, scattered eight hits and socked a two-run double.

Action Begins in 38th Annual State Indoor Meet

COLUMBIA, MO. (AP) — The 38th annual Missouri high school indoor track championships are being held at the University of Missouri's Brewer fieldhouse today and Saturday with 1,005 boys from 217 schools entered.

Class S and M meets are scheduled today, Class L Saturday. Today's events started at 12:15 p.m., with finals in the running events set for 6:30 p.m. Class L events will start at 10 a.m. Saturday, with finals in the running events slated for 1:30 p.m.

Lockwood won the Class S team title last year. West Platte was the Class M winner,and Kansas City Central the Class L champion.

Three defending individual champions are returning in Class M. They are Ken Ault of Mountain Grove in the mile, Ed Menze of Salisbury in the long jump, and Tim Reed of Carrolton in the pole vault. Gene Hansbrough of Poplar Bluff returns in the high jump in Class L.

Entries won berths in the state meet at 30 qualifying meets held around the state last week.

Grant City was favored to dethrone Lockwood as Class S champion. West Platte was the 1969 Class M champion, but Monroe City, Brentwood and Aurora are favorites for the title this time.

Kansas City Central, class L champion in six of the last seven years, is expected to repeat Saturday.

Fundamental First-Last Word of a Wooden Team

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The coaching philosophy of John Wooden is couched in old-fashioned homily.

To some it might sound "square." To others, unsophisticated.

But with it, John Wooden has brought UCLA four consecutive national collegiate basketball titles, six in the last seven years and in 22 years of tutoring basketball teams at Westwood, has never had a losing season.

The key words in the philosophy of Wooden are probably "fundamentals," "hard work," and "teamwork." To these ends, he drills his players in almost rote-like fashion for the first six weeks of practice. Before the Bruins take the court against an opponent, they rarely see a basketball and when they do it's to drill on fundamentals.

No matter how many all-city or all-state high school or junior college stars he has on his squad. The first and last word of a Wooden team is fundamental.

"When the players come out for the team, I tell them they may not be the best team in the country but they'll be the best conditioned team in the country," says the 59-year-old former English teacher.

"When the season starts, I want the players to have the confidence that they can do everything they have to fundamentally correct. And I want them to know they are the bestconditioned players on the court. It gives them a positive mental attitude and I always want my players playing positive basketball."

As for teamwork, Wooden doesn't use the word. But he does tell the players where their best shots are. And when they are.

Six-foot-eight center Steve Patterson says Wooden "never asked us to subordinate ourselves. But when we came down court in practice, if we took a shot we shouldn't have, coach will say, 'That's not your shot,' and we'd know we'd better not take it the next time.

"And if we came down court and had a good shot and didn't take it, he'd tell us 'That's your shot.'"

That slow-and easy approach to the game is backed with a rigorous training program that Wooden follows as gospel.

Each day, he walks out to practice sessions with a small index card. On that card are the type of drills that will be run that afternoon, along with the time he plans to spend on each. He doesn't vary from that schedule, which he has planned in the quiet of his office.

Asked what his reaction is to comments his team is already being chosen to win next year's championship, Wooden says: "I don't mind at all. I'd like to have other teams go out on the court knowing we're the best. The pressure is on them."

He doesn't scout opponents very much — "I worry about what we do, I don't worry about what the other team does" — and emphasizes that winning is only part of the game.

So concerned is he about his players, he constantly refers to those whose character was improved by the game. Sometimes, after talking with Wooden, one gets the impression he'd rather lose a championship game than lose the respect of his players.

But he's a tenacious battler on the court.

Discipline is his byword and if a player steps out of line — regardless of who he is — Wooden doesn't hesitate in disciplining.

"When I pulled Sidney Wicks out of our second game with USC," Wooden said, "he didn't like it very much. He was upset with me and understandably so. But when I sent him back in, he really played a game. Now, that type of discipline might not work with another player.

"That means you really have to know your players. I think I have a reasonably close relationship with our players. We may not always agree on the way to do things, but we understand each other."

Mike Hegan's run-scoring single in the seventh inning broke a 1-1 tie and carried the Pilots past Cleveland in one of only five games played Thursday.

The Chicago Cubs blasted Oakland 9-2 at Scottsdale, Ariz.; California downed San Diego 6-3 at Palm Springs, Calif.; San Francisco beat the Nagoya Chunichi Dragons 5-0 in Japan and Baltimore shipped Washington 8-2 at Miami, Fla. Seven other Florida games were washed out because of rain or wet grounds.

Ron Santo drove in three runs with a single and his third spring homer and Johnny Callison drilled a two-run triple, leading the Cubs' assault on Oakland ace John "Blue Moon" Odom.

The Angels ended San Diego's winning streak at five games behind a 10-hit spree. Bill Voss led the way, poking a double and two singles for a .400 exhibition average.

Frank Reberger and Rich Robertson combined for a three-hit shutout in the Giants' victory, which gave them a 3-4 record on their Japanese tour.

The Orioles rocked Dick Bosman for nine hits and all their runs in the second and third innings, then breezed behind the full-route pitching of Mike Cuellar. Cuellar, first Baltimore hurler to go nine innings, scattered eight hits and socked a two-run double.

Knicks Nudge Bullets In Double Overtime

NEW YORK (AP) — The New York Knicks and Baltimore Bullets, sky-high for the playoff pressure cooker, prompted a flood of superlatives from Walt Frazier.

"It was one of the guttiest games I've ever been in ... it was ... well, it was a heck of a game," the Knicks' blue chip guard said Thursday night after New York trimmed Baltimore 120-117 in a double overtime National Basketball Association playoff game.

The victory gave the Knicks a 1-0 advantage in the best-of-7 Eastern Division semifinal series which resumes tonight in Baltimore. Milwaukee, which holds a 1-0 edge on Philadelphia, plays the 76ers in Madison, Wis., in another Eastern semifinal contest.

Frazier said he felt sluggish during regulation time, but made two steals from Earl "The Pearl" Monroe in the overtime sessions to key the victory.

Frazier's steals appeared to fit into the scheme of the contest that had more turns than a Hollywood script.

Consider:

—Monroe, who had a gamehigh 39 points, missed a jumper in the final seconds of regulation time.

—Frazier knocked the ball from Monroe's hands to Dick Barnett, who raced the length of the court and missed the winning bucket at the end of the first overtime.

—Willis Reed, who missed two clutch shots and a free throw in the first extra period, turned from goat to hero with the winning basket with 33 seconds left in the second overtime.

Monroe's extraordinary jump shooting and the vibrant play of ice-cool rookie Fred Carter kept the Bullets eye-to-eye with the Knicks throughout. Carter wound up with 21 points and was a defensive marvel.

The contest was faintly reminiscent of past events. Last year, Baltimore won the Eastern Division crown and was knocked off by the third-place Knicks in four straight.

The Bullets almost pulled a turnabout this time.

Fundamental First-Last Word of a Wooden Team

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The coaching philosophy of John Wooden is couched in old-fashioned homily.

To some it might sound "square." To others, unsophisticated.

But with it, John Wooden has brought UCLA four consecutive national collegiate basketball titles, six in the last seven years and in 22 years of tutoring basketball teams at Westwood, has never had a losing season.

The key words in the philosophy of Wooden are probably "fundamentals," "hard work," and "teamwork." To these ends, he drills his players in almost rote-like fashion for the first six weeks of practice. Before the Bruins take the court against an opponent, they rarely see a basketball and when they do it's to drill on fundamentals.

No matter how many all-city or all-state high school or junior college stars he has on his squad. The first and last word of a Wooden team is fundamental.

"When the players come out for the team, I tell them they may not be the best team in the country but they'll be the best conditioned team in the country," says the 59-year-old former English teacher.

"When the season starts, I want the players to have the confidence that they can do everything they have to fundamentally correct. And I want them to know they are the bestconditioned players on the court. It gives them a positive mental attitude and I always want my players playing positive basketball."

As for teamwork, Wooden doesn't use the word. But he does tell the players where their best shots are. And when they are.

Six-foot-eight center Steve Patterson says Wooden "never asked us to subordinate ourselves. But when we came down court in practice, if we took a shot we shouldn't have, coach will say, 'That's not your shot,' and we'd know we'd better not take it the next time.

"And if we came down court and had a good shot and didn't take it, he'd tell us 'That's your shot.'"

That slow-and easy approach to the game is backed with a rigorous training program that Wooden follows as gospel.

Each day, he walks out to practice sessions with a small index card. On that card are the type of drills that will be run that afternoon, along with the time he plans to spend on each. He doesn't vary from that schedule, which he has planned in the quiet of his office.

Asked what his reaction is to comments his team is already being chosen to win next year's championship, Wooden says: "I don't mind at all. I'd like to have other teams go out on the court knowing we're the best. The pressure is on them."

He doesn't scout opponents very much — "I worry about what we do, I don't worry about what the other team does" — and emphasizes that winning is only part of the game.

So concerned is he about his players, he constantly refers to those whose character was improved by the game. Sometimes, after talking with Wooden, one gets the impression he'd rather lose a championship game than lose the respect of his players.

But he's a tenacious battler on the court.

Discipline is his byword and if a player steps out of line — regardless of who he is — Wooden doesn't hesitate in disciplining.

"When I pulled Sidney Wicks out of our second game with USC," Wooden said, "he didn't like it very much. He was upset with me and understandably so. But when I sent him back in, he really played a game. Now, that type of discipline might not work with another player.

"That means you really have to know your players. I think I have a reasonably close relationship with our players. We may not always agree on the way to do things, but we understand each other."

4 Six-Figure Signings Lend 'ro Hue to All-Star Duel

Associated Press Sports Writer

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind. (AP) — The college basketball coaches' annual East-West All-Star game will have a heavy professional flavor Saturday at Butler University's Hinkle Fieldhouse.

Rick Mount of Purdue, the first player named to play in the game this year, also was out in front in the fast break for two contracts that followed the end of the college season. He signed with the Indiana Pacers of the American Basketball Association March 9.

Other all-stars who already have turned pro include Mount's fellow All-American Dan Issel of Kentucky, Charlie Scott of North Carolina, Mike Maloy of Davidson and Rudy Tomjanovich of Michigan. All will join Mount on the East team.

West stars include Sam Lacey and Jimmy Collins of New Mexico State, Jim Ard of Cincinnati, Garfield Heard of Oklahoma and Rick Erickson of Washington.

The game, sponsored by the National Association of Basketball Coaches and the Indianapolis Star, will be televised nationally by the Hughes Sports Network. It starts at 2 p.m. EST.

This will be Mount's second appearance in the East-West series, which the East leads 4-3. As a sophomore, he had 24 points to lead all scorers, but Pete Maravich of LSU was named the game's outstanding player.

Sophomores and juniors were eligible for the game two years ago because it was used as part of the trials to select the U. S. Olympic basketball team.

Maravich declined an invitation to play this year.

Two retired coaching greats, Nat Holman of City College of New York and Bud Foster of Wisconsin, will make brief comebacks Saturday. Holman is the East coach, Foster the West coach.

Specific Charges Filed In Orton Ouster Case

JEFFERSON CITY' MO.--Under order of the Missouri Supreme Court, Attorney General John C. Danforth filed Tuesday an amended information charging Sheriff Clyde Orton of Pemiscott County with specific instances of oppression in office and neglect of duty.

The ouster action against Orton was filed by the attorney general after a series of raids by law enforcement authorities in Pemiscot County and an investigation by The Globe-Democrat into alleged gambling and liquor law violations in southeast Missouri.

Eleven specific instances were set forth to support the allegation that the sheriff "unlawfully failed to execute (his official) duties from Jan. 1, 1957 to date..."

These charges include an instance in which the sheriff is alleged to have offered to allow a man named George McRad, being held on a first degree murder charge, to leave the county jail to purchase liquor in Hayti, Mo., and bring it back to the jail.

The sheriff is alleged to have threatened in September of 1969 to jail five Mississippi state liquor control agents if they did not leave Pemiscot County, where they were conducting an investigation into alleged transportation of liquor from Missouri into Mississippi.

Orton is also alleged to have refused assistance in July of 1969 to two Florence, Ala., police officers when they asked his assistance in stopping transportation of liquor from Pemiscot County of Alabama.

The attorney general charged that Orton allowed dice and card games to be openly conducted at bars in Hayti and Caruthersville.

Several instances of alleged "wilful and malicious oppression, partiality, misconduct and abuse of authority" were listed in one section of the information.

These included alleged unlawful release of prisoners from the county jail in January of 1960, and an alleged request made by the sheriff in May of 1967 to a man named Johnny Forman, on parole from a first degree murder conviction, to purchase liquor in Hayti and bring it back to the county jail.

The attorney general alleged that during 1963 and 1964, Orton telephoned bets on horse races "for himself and others" and a deputy sheriff placed bets for him.

Orton was also alleged to have offered during 1964 to produce witnesses in a rape case "who would testify to anything he told them."

The petition renewed the plea that Orton be ordered to appear and show cause why he should not be ousted from the office of sheriff.

The Supreme Court had given Danforth 15 days to make more definite and certain allegations in the case.

In the March 9 order, the court also refused to order Danforth and Harry Wiggins, supervisor of liquor control, to stop talking to the press about the case. The court also refused to hear the case en banc.

The school district is one of the 10 AAA rated schools in the surrounding seven county area to receive this rating, from among approximately 36 high school districts in Southeast Missouri.

At a called meeting of the R-1 school board Monday night, the board set $6,200 as base salary for school teachers in the district It was also announced at the meeting that the school tax levy, to be voted on in the general election, April 7, would be $2.95, no increase from the amount set last year.

Engineer Honored for His Work in India

COLUMBIA--Although now months he was offered a leading a retired life in Ohio, permanent position as salesman. new honors still shower on Mason Vaugh, a native Missourian, in recognition of his 38 years of work in India as an agricultural engineer.

The department of agricultural engineering at the University of Allahabad in India is celebrating its Silver Jubilee this month. The event is in recognition of the years of agricultural engineering training at the institution, and the historic part played by Vaugh.

Also, the Indian Society of Agricultural Engineers will publish a special journal highlighting Vaugh's contribution to agricultural engineering education in India.

Like any developing country, agriculture has been the backbone of India's economy a long time. And, stepping up food production to feed the hungry through improved scientific practices is of paramount importance. Education in agricultural engineering is helping increase production.

One way is by providing Indian farmers with improved equipment. It is in this area Vaugh contributed much to Indian agriculture.

The story of Mason Vaugh actually begins about 75 years ago in Missouri. On June 27, 1894, he was born at Bonne Terre.

He displayed an early aptitude for scholarship. The record shows he was valedictorian of his grammar school graduating class. He earned the same honor at high school graduation time.

He enrolled in agriculture at the University of Missouri-Columbia but left in 1917 to join the Army. However, he was granted a B.S. degree in agriculture in 1919, the same year he finished military service.

He worked for an agricultural implement company. After six months he was offered a permanent position as salesman. He declined. Instead, Vaugh returned to UMC as an agricultural engineering student.

In 1921 he was granted the B.S. degree in agricultural engineering. According to department files, Vaugh was the second University of Missouri-Columbia agricultural engineering graduate.

The agricultural engineer headed for New York. There he worked in the offices of the Board of Foreign Missions of the Presbyterian Church. It was there he was perhaps filled with a desire to help less fortunate people of the world. Maybe, too, the young man was struck with a spirit of adventure. In any event, he was off to India as a missionary in 1921.

He joined Allahabad Agricultural Institute. Need was felt for a school designed to benefit agricultural production. Logically, Vaugh, the only person available with engineering expertise in agriculture, put his talents to work. He quickly laid the groundwork for an agricultural engineering workshop. Immediate problems were the first concern in his workshop.

In 1928, the training was offered to students in agricultural engineering on three-year apprenticeship basis. Enrollment was limited to 10 students. They were trained in maintaining and repairing agricultural implements, engine driving, carpentry, and bricklaying.

The main emphasis was on training in simple and practical mechanization for the small farmer--designing simple tools and equipment, small hand tools, pumps, and bullock-drawn farm implements. As a result of this work, Vaugh wrote a number of technical papers on farm mechanization for small landholders in India.

Through his efforts, which called for diplomacy and tact, Vaugh secured the cooperation of state and central government. That cooperation resulted in substantial financial grants to establish a Bachelor of Science course at Allahabad Agricultural Institute. Grants also provided for facilities to improve land for cultivation, including construction of tube wells.

An implement factory, in the name of "Agricultural Development Society," was established by Vaugh. It is still meeting needs of Indian farmers by producing equipment based on his reasearch.

What began as an apprenticeship in agricultural engineering, became a two-year, three-year, then four-year course of study. In July, 1964 , a Master's degree program in agricultural engineering was launched at the University of Allahabad.

At the time of mandatory retirement at Allahabad University, Vaugh's services were regarded as indispensable. He remained to conduct seminars and serve on academic committees.

Vaugh, called the father of agricultural engineering in India, has served that government as advisor on agricultural engineering and sat on numerous committees.

He is remembered in India for many things--research in rural housing, aspects of village sanitation, and kitchens. His notes on farm machinery, farm power, farm buildings, and workshop are considered standard literature by agricultural engineers all over the country.

His efforts have resulted in many honors including honorary life membership in the American Society of Agricultural Engineers. He received a University of Missouri-Columbia Honor Award for Distinguished Service in Engineering in 1959.

Vaugh has more than a professional side. He and his wife performed missionary work with zeal. Their efforts resulted in establishing the Naini Community Church. Funds they raised helped construct a church building.

The Vaughs provided scholarships for Indian children. Mrs. Vaugh helped village women establish a flourishing basket industry.

Mason Vaugh formally retired June 30, 1959. He lives at 433 Bloomington Ave., Wooster, Ohio 44691.

The term "Mach 1" designates the speed of an airplane flying at the speed of sound. When flying twice the speed of sound, the term "Mach 2" is used. The prefix Mach comes from the name of Ernst Mach, a Czech-born German physicist, who contributed to the study of sound, says The World Almanac. The speed of sound is usually placed at 1' feet per second at sea ... at 32 degrees Fahrenheit.

Specific Charges Filed In Orton Ouster Case

JEFFERSON CITY' MO.--Under order of the Missouri Supreme Court, Attorney General John C. Danforth filed Tuesday an amended information charging Sheriff Clyde Orton of Pemiscott County with specific instances of oppression in office and neglect of duty.

The ouster action against Orton was filed by the attorney general after a series of raids by law enforcement authorities in Pemiscot County and an investigation by The Globe-Democrat into alleged gambling and liquor law violations in southeast Missouri.

Eleven specific instances were set forth to support the allegation that the sheriff "unlawfully failed to execute (his official) duties from Jan. 1, 1957 to date..."

These charges include an instance in which the sheriff is alleged to have offered to allow a man named George McRad, being held on a first degree murder charge, to leave the county jail to purchase liquor in Hayti, Mo., and bring it back to the jail.

The sheriff is alleged to have threatened in September of 1969 to jail five Mississippi state liquor control agents if they did not leave Pemiscot County, where they were conducting an investigation into alleged transportation of liquor from Missouri into Mississippi.

Orton is also alleged to have refused assistance in July of 1969 to two Florence, Ala., police officers when they asked his assistance in stopping transportation of liquor from Pemiscot County of Alabama.

The attorney general charged that Orton allowed dice and card games to be openly conducted at bars in Hayti and Caruthersville.

Several instances of alleged "wilful and malicious oppression, partiality, misconduct and abuse of authority" were listed in one section of the information.

These included alleged unlawful release of prisoners from the county jail in January of 1960, and an alleged request made by the sheriff in May of 1967 to a man named Johnny Forman, on parole from a first degree murder conviction, to purchase liquor in Hayti and bring it back to the county jail.

The attorney general alleged that during 1963 and 1964, Orton telephoned bets on horse races "for himself and others" and a deputy sheriff placed bets for him.

Orton was also alleged to have offered during 1964 to produce witnesses in a rape case "who would testify to anything he told them."

The petition renewed the plea that Orton be ordered to appear and show cause why he should not be ousted from the office of sheriff.

The Supreme Court had given Danforth 15 days to make more definite and certain allegations in the case.

In the March 9 order, the court also refused to order Danforth and Harry Wiggins, supervisor of liquor control, to stop talking to the press about the case. The court also refused to hear the case en banc.

East Prairie Schools Win AAA Rating

EAST PRAIRIE --Ray Melton, superintendant of the East Prairie R-2 school district, received official notice today from the state department of education, that the school system has received the triple A rating for the 1969-70 school year. The school offers 81 and 3/4 units of approved high school credits, a requirement to be eligible for the AAA rating.

The school district is one of the 10 AAA rated schools in the surrounding seven county area to receive this rating, from among approximately 36 high school districts in Southeast Missouri.

At a called meeting of the R-1 school board Monday night, the board set $6,200 as base salary for school teachers in the district. It was also announced at the meeting that the school tax levy, to be voted on in the general election, April 7, would be $2.95, no increase from the amount set last year.

In other business brought before the board, it was decided to have school on Friday to make up the day lost last week due to the snow.

Engineer Honored for His Work in India

COLUMBIA--Although now leading a retired life in Ohio, new honors still shower on Mason Vaugh, a native Missourian, in recognition of his 38 years of work in India as an agricultural engineer.

The department of agricultural engineering at the University of Allahabad in India is celebrating its Silver Jubilee this month. The event is in recognition of the years of agricultural engineering training at the institution, and the historic part played by Vaugh.

Also, the Indian Society of Agricultural Engineers will publish a special journal highlighting Vaugh's contribution to agricultural engineering education in India.

Like any developing country, agriculture has been the backbone of India's economy a long time. And, stepping up food production to feed the hungry through improved scientific practices is of paramount importance. Education in agricultural engineering is helping increase production.

One way is by providing Indian farmers with improved equipment. It is in this area Vaugh contributed much to Indian agriculture.

The story of Mason Vaugh actually begins about 75 years ago in Missouri. On June 27, 1894, he was born at Bonne Terre.

He displayed an early aptitude for scholarship. The record shows he was valedictorian of his grammar school graduating class. He earned the same honor at high school graduation time.

He enrolled in agriculture at the University of Missouri-Columbia but left in 1917 to join the Army. However, he was granted a B.S. degree in agriculture in 1919, the same year he finished military service.

He worked for an agricultural implement company. After six months he was offered a permanent position as salesman. He declined. Instead, Vaugh returned to UMC as an agricultural engineering student.

In 1921 he was granted the B.S. degree in agricultural engineering. According to department files, Vaugh was the second University of Missouri-Columbia agricultural engineering graduate.

The agricultural engineer headed for New York. There he worked in the offices of the Board of Foreign Missions of the Presbyterian Church. It was there he was perhaps filled with a desire to help less fortunate people of the world. Maybe, too, the young man was struck with a spirit of adventure. In any event, he was off to India as a missionary in 1921.

He joined Allahabad Agricultural Institute. Need was felt for a school designed to benefit agricultural production. Logically, Vaugh, the only person available with engineering expertise in agriculture, put his talents to work. He quickly laid the groundwork for an agricultural engineering workshop. Immediate problems were the first concern in his workshop.

In 1928, the training was offered to students in agricultural engineering on three-year apprenticeship basis. Enrollment was limited to 10 students. They were trained in maintaining and repairing agricultural implements, engine driving, carpentry, and bricklaying.

The main emphasis was on training in simple and practical mechanization for the small farmer--designing simple tools and equipment, small hand tools, pumps, and bullock-drawn farm implements. As a result of this work, Vaugh wrote a number of technical papers on farm mechanization for small landholders in India.

Through his efforts, which called for diplomacy and tact, Vaugh secured the cooperation of state and central government. That cooperation resulted in substantial financial grants to establish a Bachelor of Science course at Allahabad Agricultural Institute. Grants also provided for facilities to improve land for cultivation, including construction of tube wells.

An implement factory, in the name of "Agricultural Development Society," was established by Vaugh. It is still meeting needs of Indian farmers by producing equipment based on his reasearch.

What began as an apprenticeship in agricultural engineering, became a two-year, three-year, then four-year course of study. In July, 1964, a Master's degree program in agricultural engineering was launched at the University of Allahabad.

At the time of mandatory retirement at Allahabad University, Vaugh's services were regarded as indispensable. He remained to conduct seminars and serve on academic committees.

Vaugh, called the father of agricultural engineering in India, has served that government as advisor on agricultural engineering and sat on numerous committees.

He is remembered in India for many things--research in rural housing, aspects of village sanitation, and kitchens. His notes on farm machinery, farm power, farm buildings, and workshop are considered standard literature by agricultural engineers all over the country.

His efforts have resulted in many honors including honorary life membership in the American Society of Agricultural Engineers. He received a University of Missouri-Columbia Honor Award for Distinguished Service in Engineering in 1959.

Vaugh has more than a professional side. He and his wife performed missionary work with zeal. Their efforts resulted in establishing the Naini Community Church. Funds they raised helped construct a church building.

The Vaughs provided scholarships for Indian children. Mrs. Vaugh helped village women establish a flourishing basket industry.

Mason Vaugh formally retired June 30, 1959. He lives at 433 Bloomington Ave., Wooster, Ohio 44691.

The term "Mach 1" designates the speed of an airplane flying at the speed of sound. When flying twice the speed of sound, the term "Mach 2" is used. The prefix Mach comes from the name of Ernst Mach, a Czech-born German physicist, who contributed to the study of sound, says The World Almanac. The speed of sound is usually placed at 1' feet per second at sea ... at 32 degrees Fahrenheit.

Revolution and Jesus -4

"Crime" of Christ: High Treason

(Editor's note: The ruling establishment condemned Jesus, and throughout history, in times of tension and turmoil, governments sometimes have executed and imprisoned heroic men. It was in such a revolutionary era that Jesus lived. The following article, fourth in a five-part series about the surging ferments of that period, is about the state-determined "crime" of Christ.)

By George W. Cornell
AP Religion Writer

Over his head hung an official Roman titulus citing the crime of which Jesus had been convicted. The lettering was repeated in three languages, Hebrew, Latin and Greek, on heavy papyrus: "The King of the Jews."

The offense, in legal terms: High treason against the Roman Empire.

"E'lo-i, E'lo-i, la'ma sabach-tha'ni?" he cried out loudly as he writhed on the cross, voicing in his native Hebrew Aramaic a lonely, dispairing lament of Psalms 22: "My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me?"

It was part of a prayer that devout Jews used in time of deep adversity. "I am poured out like water," it went, "All my bones are out of joint; my heart is like wax ... melted within me ... Thou dost lay me in the dust of death."

As the pangs of it poured through Jesus, a darkening overcast covered the Judean landscape. But even in the darkest agony, the old prayer of his people that he uttered ends on a triumphant note — and would for him. "Praise the Lord ... He rules!"

But now, bleeding, wrenched by cramps, gasping for air, Jesus traversed the human abyss.

Rome's provincial governor, Pontius Pilate, had found him guilty of conspiring against the military government in quest of royal power, and had sentenced him to crucifixion, the imperial penalty for traitors and criminal slaves.

The outcome paralleled the tensions convulsing the country.

It churned with intrigue, plots and stormy public protests, including a huge 75-mile "march" to Pilate's headquarters in Caesarea and a death-defying six-day "lie-in" there demanding removal from Jerusalem of Roman ensigns deifying Caesar. The masses hated the heathen conqueror's domination, and armed Zealot patriots made raids against it, urging general revolt, which ultimately occurred.

Jesus himself had been imprisoned with a company of rebels, rounded up about the same time, according to Mard 15:7, in a turbulent Jerusalem uprising involving fatalities. In subsequent years, local authorities linked Jesus' followers with seditious activity. He had a Zealot among his apostles. One known insurrectionist, Barabbas, was granted amnesty, but not Jesus.

"The authorities were afraid of his political power," writer theologian William H. Farmer in a book, "Maccabees, Zealots and Josephus." "Jesus not only matched the zeal of a zealot, he was crucified 'as a Zealot'."

While he shared their zeal for God's sovereignty over life and devotion to his native Jewish heritage, he did not endorse their partisan faction nor their armed tactics, and his purpose and vision far transcended their limited movement.

Only by the most flagrant distortion could a magistrate have found subversive ambitions in one who identified himself with the lowliest, who said the highest response to him was to feed the hungry, clothe the naked, comfort the sick, imprisoned and lonely.

"As you did it to one of the least of these my brethren, you did it to me."

Yet throughout history, governments and courts have sometimes condemned heroic men, in the past as well as in the modern age — Socrates, Jan Huss, Thomas Beckett, Nathan Hale, Dietrich Bonhoeffer, the Nazi execution of resisters and of Jewish millions, the Stalinist purges, the imprisonments of Gandhi, Nehru, De Valera, Emil Zola, John Peter Zenger, Martin Luther King, of many ministers and nuns in modern times.

But the condemnation of Jesus, the exemplar of goodness, stands as man's grossest perversion of justice and starkest rejection of the right.

"Father, forgive them," he prayed on the cross, "for they know not what they do."

As Pilate had inscribed the titulus specifying his offense, subordinates of the collaborating Sadducean hierarchy who had supplied the governor with evidence, suggested, "Do not write, 'The King of the Jews', but 'This man said I am King of the Jews.'"

Pilate, as recounted in John 19:22, spurned the request. "What I have written I have written." The wording, to be affixed above the victim, bespoke both Pilate's contempt for the Jews and the consequences he meted out to any who defied the Roman masters.

Although Jesus had been subjected to a clamorous, denunciatory pre-trial interrogation by Jerusalem's council, the Sanhedrin, dominated by pro-Roman Sadducees, the affair meant little, since no sentence was passed. The decision was up to Pilate.

Although Mark 15:3 says Jesus was accused of "many things" before the governor, only Luke details any of them, namely that he subverted the nation, excited crowds, forbade tribute to Caesar and claimed a kingship.

"We found this man perverting our nation and forbidding us to give tribute to Caesar, and saying that he himself is Christ a king," charged the Sadducean officials, who were resented by the ordinary populace and whose party soon disappeared from history. "He stirs up the people, teaching throughout all Judea, from Galilee even to this place."

The charge of defying the tribute tax was false, by the gospel record, although Jesus's quoted comment about it was so couched that it could mean all life belonged to the Creator, and in that context, Caesar should get not a whit more than his "due."

As for the other charges, Jesus could not deny that he had aroused strong public reactions, and had a wide, fervent following. Nor could he forswear his Messianic mission, no matter how it was misconstrued in an immediate political sense.

"Are you the King of the Jews?" Pilate asked him.

"You have said so." The reply has been interpreted either as a non-commital refusal to answer or as a recognized Semetic expression for "Yes."

Matthew, Mark and Luke cite only that response, but the gospel of John, written in the late first century and most distantly from the events, also quotes him as saying, "My kingship is not of this world."

"So you are a king?" Pilate persisted.

"You say that I am a king," Jesus answered. "For this I was born, and for this I have come into the world to bear witness to the truth."

Pilate offered his cynical rejoinder, "What is truth?"

He was an arrogant, ruthless man, described by the philosopher Philo of that time as "inflexible and stubbornly relentless," inflicting "corruption, rapine and outrages on the people, repeated murders of innocent victims and constant and most galling savagery."

Once, to break up a mass protest against him in the Temple square, he deployed soldiers disguised in civilian garb with concealed weapons to mingle with the multitude. At his signal, they struck, killing and wounding many and dispersing the demonstration.

On other occasions, his roving cavalry wreaked slaughter on suspected rebels in Galilee, and once wiped out hundreds of armed Samaritans assembled on Mount Gerrizim. Rome's emperor Tiberius finally deposed him for his barbarity.

Although the gospels depict Pilate as a hesitant, vacillating man who preferred to release Jesus, thereby condemning him in fawning surrender to mob demands, the picture squares neither with all other descriptions of Pilate's conduct and character, nor with the situation in Jerusalem at the time.

However, the gospels were written at a time when Christianity, an illegal religion, faced recurrent persecutions by the Roman empire, at a time when its very survival may have depended on being gingerly defensive about Rome's responsibility for the crucifixion, focusing instead on secondary elements among Jesus' own people. The Book of Revelation also wraps the atrocities of Roman tyranny in obscure symbolism, clear then only to Jews and Christian initiates.

Nevertheless, deftly distributed through the gospel narratives, the central facts of Rome's responsibility are clearly set forth, despite the tendency to concentrate on the clamor against Jesus by a Temple claque.

That group, led by the Rome-picked chief priest and collaborating Sadducees, could only have been a tiny handful of official partisans clustered at the gate of (not inside) Pilate's courtroom-sized, walled praetorium, while Jerusalem itself thronged with more than a million (says historian Josephus) people there for the Passover. Many had fervently acclaimed Jesus.

However, in the early morning, according to John's gospel, before the general populace could have known about it, the chief priests "stirred up" the Temple group. The trial was over by the third hour (9 a.m.), following Jesus' arrest around midnight. That had been the stated plan, to dispose of him hastily and covertly to avoid, says Mark, a feared "tumult of the people."

Historian-theologian S.F.G. Brandon says it is inconceivable that a Roman governor known for his "tough character and notorious contempt for the Jews" would have yielded weakly to a little coterie of them and "condemned one whom he knew to be innocent," while releasing Barabbas, a known blood-letting revolutionary.

In any case, whatever Pilate's equivocations, the record says he decreed the penalty.

He also had Jesus flogged at the military barracks. Roman scourgings for sedition were particularly brutal, often fatal, and Jesus was severely weakened even before the execution.

"Hail, king of the Jews!" the legionnaires taunted him, putting a purple mantle around his bleeding shoulders, jamming a crown plaited of spiny akanthus on his head. They spat on him and whipped his face with sticks.

Bruised and lacerated, he was taken to the rocky, skull-shaped hill of execution, Golgotha, where his arms were pinioned to the crosspiece, which was then hoisted to the upright. His legs were set astride a peg and his feet nailed down.

Two other malefactors, described as "robbers" or "brigands," terms commonly used in that era by historian Josephus and others for "rebels" against Roman rule, hung on either side of Jesus.

"The men were probably revolutionaries, and may have been arrested with Barabbas," writes Biblical scholar George A. Buttrick. "It is not unlikely that they were also robbers. Rebels against injustices of government often turn to banditry."

A Roman detail stood watch, and a motley crowd from the city and a nearby crossroads stared at the tortured victims.

Crucifixion, the cruel, slow death taken over by the Romans from the Phoenicians, killed by sheer pain, exhaustion and gradual suffocation, the cramped rib cage forcing the victim to press upward to get air. The torn flesh swelled around the nails as muscular cramps and fevers wracked the body, flooding blood into the throbbing brain while convulsions ripped at the wounds.

"Father, into thy hands I commit my spirit!" Jesus said. The desperate old question of the Psalms, "why?", which had burst from his throat, concluded in ringing confidence — God has not turned away nor "hid his face" from the afflicted. "Praise the Lord! ... Posterity shall proclaim his deliverance to a people yet unborn, and he has wrought it."

"It is finished," Jesus said, and died.

But his work would go on, and the mark of revolution inscribed on his case by Pilate would pursue his followers. When Paul was snatched from a riot in Jerusalem, as told in Acts 21, a Roman tribune asked if he were not the Egyptian Jew who had assembled 4,000 Assassins (Zealot Sicarii) in the wilderness.

Again, when the apostles were arrested for defying an order to keep silent about Jesus, as related in Acts 5, a noted Pharisee scholar, Gamaliel, advised against punishing them, observing that death had dealt decisively with several Zealot rebels, such as Theudas and Judas the Galilean. The apostle Peter, on that occasion, flung out Zealot defiance:

"We must obey God rather than men."

Revolution and Jesus -4

"Crime" of Christ: High Treason

(Editor's note: The ruling establishment condemned Jesus, and throughout history, in times of tension and turmoil, governments sometimes have executed and imprisoned heroic men. It was in such a revolutionary era that Jesus lived. The following article, fourth in a five-part series about the surging ferments of that period, is about the state-determined "crime" of Christ.)

By George W. Cornell
AP Religion Writer

Over his head hung an official Roman titulus citing the crime of which Jesus had been convicted. The lettering was repeated in three languages, Hebrew, Latin and Greek, on heavy papyrus: "The King of the Jews."

The offense, in legal terms: High treason against the Roman Empire.

"E'lo-i, E'lo-i, la'ma sabach-tha'ni?" he cried out loudly as he writhed on the cross, voicing in his native Hebrew Aramaic a lonely, dispairing lament of Psalms 22: "My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me?"

It was part of a prayer that devout Jews used in time of deep adversity. "I am poured out like water," it went, "All my bones are out of joint; my heart is like wax ... melted within me ... Thou dost lay me in the dust of death."

As the pangs of it poured through Jesus, a darkening overcast covered the Judean landscape. But even in the darkest agony, the old prayer of his people that he uttered ends on a triumphant note — and would for him. "Praise the Lord ... He rules!"

But now, bleeding, wrenched by cramps, gasping for air, Jesus traversed the human abyss.

Rome's provincial governor, Pontius Pilate, had found him guilty of conspiring against the military government in quest of royal power, and had sentenced him to crucifixion, the imperial penalty for traitors and criminal slaves.

The outcome paralleled the tensions convulsing the country.

It churned with intrigue, plots and stormy public protests, including a huge 75-mile "march" to Pilate's headquarters in Caesarea and a death-defying six-day "lie-in" there demanding removal from Jerusalem of Roman ensigns deifying Caesar. The masses hated the heathen conqueror's domination, and armed Zealot patriots made raids against it, urging general revolt, which ultimately occurred.

Jesus himself had been imprisoned with a company of rebels, rounded up about the same time, according to Mard 15:7, in a turbulent Jerusalem uprising involving fatalities. In subsequent years, local authorities linked Jesus' followers with seditious activity. He had a Zealot among his apostles. One known insurrectionist, Barabbas, was granted amnesty, but not Jesus.

"The authorities were afraid of his political power," writer theologian William H. Farmer in a book, "Maccabees, Zealots and Josephus." "Jesus not only matched the zeal of a zealot, he was crucified 'as a Zealot'."

While he shared their zeal for God's sovereignty over life and devotion to his native Jewish heritage, he did not endorse their partisan faction nor their armed tactics, and his purpose and vision far transcended their limited movement.

Only by the most flagrant distortion could a magistrate have found subversive ambitions in one who identified himself with the lowliest, who said the highest response to him was to feed the hungry, clothe the naked, comfort the sick, imprisoned and lonely.

"As you did it to one of the least of these my brethren, you did it to me."

Yet throughout history, governments and courts have sometimes condemned heroic men, in the past as well as in the modern age — Socrates, Jan Huss, Thomas Beckett, Nathan Hale, Dietrich Bonhoeffer, the Nazi execution of resisters and of Jewish millions, the Stalinist purges, the imprisonments of Gandhi, Nehru, De Valera, Emil Zola, John Peter Zenger, Martin Luther King, of many ministers and nuns in modern times.

But the condemnation of Jesus, the exemplar of goodness, stands as men's grossest perversion of justice and starkest rejection of the right.

"Father, forgive them," he prayed on the cross, "for they know not what they do."

As Pilate had inscribed the titulus specifying his offense, subordinates of the collaborating Sadducean hierarchy who had supplied the governor with evidence, suggested, "Do not write, 'The King of the Jews', but 'This man said I am King of the Jews.'"

Pilate, as recounted in John 19:22, spurned the request. "What I have written I have written." The wording, to be affixed above the victim, bespoke both Pilate's contempt for the Jews and the consequences he meted out to any who defied the Roman masters.

Although Jesus had been subjected to a clamorous, denunciatory pre-trial interrogation by Jerusalem's council, the Sanhedrin, dominated by pro-Roman Sadducees, the affair meant little, since no sentence was passed. The decision was up to Pilate.

Although Mark 15:3 says Jesus was accused of "many things" before the governor, only Luke details any of them, namely that he subverted the nation, excited crowds, forbade tribute to Caesar and claimed a kingship.

"We found this man perverting our nation and forbidding us to give tribute to Caesar, and saying that he himself is Christ a king," charged the Sadducean officials, who were resented by the ordinary populace and whose party soon disappeared from history. "He stirs up the people, teaching throughout all Judea, from Galilee even to this place."

The charge of defying the tribute tax was false, by the gospel record, although Jesus's quoted comment about it was so couched that it could mean all life belonged to the Creator, and in that context, Caesar should get not a whit more than his "due."

As for the other charges, Jesus could not deny that he had aroused strong public reactions, and had a wide, fervent following. Nor could he forswear his Messianic mission, no matter how it was misconstrued in an immediate political sense.

"Are you the King of the Jews?" Pilate asked him.

"You have said so." The reply has been interpreted either as a non-commital refusal to answer or as a recognized Semetic expression for "Yes."

Matthew, Mark and Luke cite only that response, but the gospel of John, written in the late first century and most distantly from the events, also quotes him as saying, "My kingship is not of this world."

"So you are a king?" Pilate persisted.

"You say that I am a king," Jesus answered. "For this I was born, and for this I have come into the world to bear witness to the truth."

Pilate offered his cynical rejoinder, "What is truth?"

He was an arrogant, ruthless man, described by the philosopher Philo of that time as "inflexible and stubbornly relentless," inflicting "corruption, rapine and outrages on the people, repeated murders of innocent victims and constant and most galling savagery."

Once, to break up a mass protest against him in the Temple square, he deployed soldiers disguised in civilian garb with concealed weapons to mingle with the multitude. At his signal, they struck, killing and wounding many and dispersing the demonstration.

On other occasions, his roving cavalry wreaked slaughter on suspected rebels in Galilee, and once wiped out hundreds of armed Samaritans assembled on Mount Gerrizim. Rome's emperor Tiberius finally deposed him for his barbarity.

Although the gospels depict Pilate as a hesitant, vacillating man who preferred to release Jesus, thereby condemning him in fawning surrender to mob demands, the picture squares neither with all other descriptions of Pilate's conduct and character, nor with the situation in Jerusalem at the time.

However, the gospels were written at a time when Christianity, an illegal religion, faced recurrent persecutions by the Roman empire, at a time when its very survival may have depended on being gingerly defensive about Rome's responsibility for the crucifixion, focusing instead on secondary elements among Jesus' own people. The Book of Revelation also wraps the atrocities of Roman tyranny in obscure symbolism, clear then only to Jews and Christian initiates.

Nevertheless, deftly distributed through the gospel narratives, the central facts of Rome's responsibility are clearly set forth, despite the tendency to concentrate on the clamor against Jesus by a Temple claque.

That group, led by the Rome-picked chief priest and collaborating Sadducees, could only have been a tiny handful of official partisans clustered at the gate of (not inside) Pilate's courtroom-sized, walled praetorium, while Jerusalem itself thronged with more than a million (says historian Josephus) people there for the Passover. Many had fervently acclaimed Jesus.

However, in the early morning, according to John's gospel, before the general populace could have known about it, the chief priests "stirred up" the Temple group. The trial was over by the third hour (9 a.m.), following Jesus' arrest around midnight. That had been the stated plan, to dispose of him hastily and covertly to avoid, says Mark, a feared "tumult of the people."

Historian-theologian S.F.G. Brandon says it is inconceivable that a Roman governor known for his "tough character and notorious contempt for the Jews" would have yielded weakly to a little coterie of them and "condemned one whom he knew to be innocent," while releasing Barabbas, a known blood-letting revolutionary.

In any case, whatever Pilate's equivocations, the record says he decreed the penalty.

He also had Jesus flogged at the military barracks. Roman scourgings for sedition were particularly brutal, often fatal, and Jesus was severely weakened even before the execution.

"Hail, king of the Jews!" the legionnaires taunted him, putting a purple mantle around his bleeding shoulders, jamming a crown plaited of spiny akanthus on his head. They spat on him and whipped his face with sticks.

Bruised and lacerated, he was taken to the rocky, skull-shaped hill of execution, Golgotha, where his arms were pinioned to the crosspiece, which was then hoisted to the upright. His legs were set astride a peg and his feet nailed down.

Two other malefactors, described as "robbers" or "brigands," terms commonly used in that era by historian Josephus and others for "rebels" against Roman rule, hung on either side of Jesus.

"The men were probably revolutionaries, and may have been arrested with Barabbas," writes Biblical scholar George A. Buttrick. "It is not unlikely that they were also robbers. Rebels against injustices of government often turn to banditry."

A Roman detail stood watch, and a motley crowd from the city and a nearby crossroads stared at the tortured victims.

Crucifixion, the cruel, slow death taken over by the Romans from the Phoenicians, killed by sheer pain, exhaustion and gradual suffocation, the cramped rib cage forcing the victim to press upward to get air. The torn flesh swelled around the nails as muscular cramps and fevers wracked the body, flooding blood into the throbbing brain while convulsions ripped at the wounds.

"Father, into thy hands I commit my spirit!" Jesus said. The desperate old question of the Psalms, "why?", which had burst from his throat, concluded in ringing confidence — God has not turned away nor "hid his face" from the afflicted. "Praise the Lord! ... Posterity shall proclaim his deliverance to a people yet unborn, and he has wrought it."

"It is finished," Jesus said, and died.

But his work would go on, and the mark of revolution inscribed on his case by Pilate would pursue his followers. When Paul was snatched from a riot in Jerusalem, as told in Acts 21, a Roman tribune asked if he were not the Egyptian Jew who had assembled 4,000 Assassins (Zealot Sicarii) in the wilderness.

Again, when the apostles were arrested for defying an order to keep silent about Jesus, as related in Acts 5, a noted Pharisee scholar, Gamaliel, advised against punishing them, observing that death had dealt decisively with several Zealot rebels, such as Theudas and Judas the Galilean. The apostle Peter, on that occasion, flung out Zealot defiance:

"We must obey God rather than men."

SAN JOSE, Calif. (AP) — A sure-fire way of cementing marriages is doing crossword puzzle contests with your spouse.

So says Mrs. Shirley Sternad who recently won first prize, $12,850, in the American Holiday Association national crossword puzzle contest. Her husband Nicholas helped her with the puzzle.

"Instead of going out nights we stayed home and worked on the puzzle," Mrs. Sternad said. "Couples would do their marriages much good by doing a joint effort. They wouldn't have to argue about where to go at night," said Mrs. Sternad.

EDMUND JAMES DEVLIN

Gang Chief on FBI List

WASHINGTON--Edmund James Devlin, a reputed Connecticut organized crime gang leader who is charged with federal crimes including armed bank robbery, has been added to the FBI's list of 10 Most Wanted Fugitives.

Devlin and two accomplices allegedly entered the Fairfield County Trust Company, Connecticut and Richards Avenues, Norwalk, Connecticut, on the morning of January 9, 1969, wearing rubber Halloween face masks and carrying pistols. The gunmen seized $106,333, stuffed the loot into a white laundry bag and escaped in a stolen getaway car. Two of the alleged bandits have been taken into custody, but Devlin, who has reputedly been active in numerous criminal activities including gambling and loan-sharking, remains at large. A Federal warrant charging him with bank robbery was issued at New Haven, Connecticut, on September 10, 1969.

Devlin is also charged in a Federal warrant issued at New Haven on October 7, 1969, with interstate transportation of stolen property and conspiracy, resulting from his alleged involvement in the cashing of a large number of stolen money orders. He had been indicted for these offenses in December, 1968, and released on bond but subsequently failed to appear for a court hearing in September, 1969, following which his $50,000 bond was revoked and a warrant for his arrest issued.

He has been suspected of involvement in additional bank robberies in Connecticut and has reportedly been involved in gangland warfare with an underworld rival.

Well known in underworld circles, Devlin was first convicted in 1950 in Connecticut when he was given a one-year sentence for breaking and entering and theft. Following a 1951 arrest in Connecticut, he was given an indefinite sentence in the Connecticut State Reformatory for attempted robbery with violence and simple assault. In 1956 he was given a seven - to twelve - year term at the Connecticut State Penitentiary, Wethersfield, upon conviction for armed robbery, and in October, 1961, he was paroled. In February, 1964, he was returned to the penitentiary for parole violation and in June, 1966, was again released on parole.

In March, 1967, upon conviction in New Hampshire for intent to cheat and defraud, he was given a one-year to 18-month sentence and was paroled in September, 1967.

A white American who was born at New Haven, Connecticut, on December 27, 1933, Devlin is 5'6" to 5'7" tall, weighs 190 to 215 pounds, has a heavy build, light complexion, blue eyes and light brown hair. He has a scar on his left wrist and the tatoos of "DOT" on his upper right arm and "THERESA" on his upper left arm. He has been employed as a bricklayer, car salesman, factory worker, ironworker, laborer and trucker.

He reportedly has a quiet manner, dresses conservatively in expensive clothes, enjoys eating and frequenting high class restaurants and night clubs, drinks scotch whisky, smokes cigarettes, likes to attend horse races and baseball games, and abhors manual labor.

Devlin is sought for a bank robbery in which handguns were used and may be accompanied by Thomas Francis Viola, Jr., another Federal fugitive who is charged with interstate flight to avoid prosecution for murder. Both should be considered armed and very dangerous.

Anyone with information concerning Devlin, or Viola, should immediately contact the nearest office of the FBI, the telephone number of which may be found on the first page of local telephone directories.

Moon Dust Coming to Columbia

COLUMBIA - The National Aeronautics and Space Administration has notified Dr. Walter D. Keller, University of Missouri professor of geology, that a vial of "moon dust," the first of two samples to be used in experiments designed to investgate the weathering effects of the earth's atmosphere on lunar materials, should arrive in Columbia in the near future.

The University curators have accepted a NASA grant that includes the samples, as well as funds to carry out the research for which Dr. Keller will be prinicpal investigator.

Dr. Keller says if the sample arrives in a transparent vial, the "moon dust" will be put on public display for a short itme, but, if it arrives in a non-transparent container, the sample will not be displayed in order to avoid altering the atmosphere within he container.

If the dust comes in suitable form, Dr. Keller will announce the exhibition time after its arrival.

Scooped from he moon by the crew of Apollo 12, the dust is part of the contingency sample shoveled from the Ocean of Storms immediately after landing, in the event a quick departure had been necissitated.

Dr. Keller says the sample is well-suited to his experiments, and he considers himself lucky since only a small amount of dust was retrieved. Most of the Apollo 12 samples were of the rock variety, and Dr. Keller expects the second sample, which will arrive at an undertermined future date, will be of this variety.

The fine-grained lunar material is described by Dr. Keller as similar to the product of weathering of massive, solid rocks on earth or, as scientists call it, "regolith." On earth regolith is formed chiefly through the chemical reaction of rocks with water, oxygen, carbon dioxide, and acids present in soil, and by the action of mechanical forces on rocks.

Through these processes, the rocks are reduced to boulders, gravel, sand, clay and dissolved substances. Weathering also unlocks plant-nutrient substances from the rocks and makes them available to plants and to man. Unlike earth the moon lacks sufficient gravitational pull to hold water vapor and atmospheric gases; thus moon rocks have not been exposed to weathering as it occurs here. Dr. Keller believes this may be the greatest single difference between the earth and lunar surfaces.

In the experiment Dr. Keller, who will be principle investigator, and his associate investigator, Dr. Wen Hsing Huang, a post doctoral fellow in geology at UMC, will pulvarize the moon dust and dissolve it in distilled (rain) water and in various acids representative of those in soils. Among the latter will be acetic acid which is present in household vinegar and salicylic acid which is a component of ordinary aspirin.

After waiting an appropriate time period, Dr. Keller and his associate will analyse the solutions by X-ray and other techniques in order to discover what differences caused by the "weathering" process can be observed.

Dr. Keller says since the experimental process will require extensive time and because tight security precautions are necessary when working with the NASA samples, the dust will be exhibited only once. He says the experiment will take approximately six months to complete.

Long-Range Effects of Sihanouk Fall Not Cheery

By WILLIAM L. RYAN
AP Special Correspondent

At first blush it might have seemed to some Americans that the overthrow of Prince Norodom Sihanouk in Cambodia was good news. But the more they study it, the gloomier the prospects tend to look for all of Indochina, including Laos and Vietnam.

Prince Sihanouk, from his place of exile in Red China, has called for a "liberation army" to do battle with the men in Phnom Penh who ousted him last week. It is no idle boast. Sihanouk has a good chance of making a comback and thus rendering the over-all situation in Southeast Asia a good deal worse than it was to begin with.

Sihanouk won't need much strength on his own if he is going to get what he calls the help of "brotherly nations." The pattern in Cambodia easily could be made to resemble what happened in neighboring Laos, now torn in two by a North Vietnamese invasion to support a so-called liberation movement.

The Red Khmer — Cambodia's Communist party—already exists in that country as the framework for the "liberation" movement. It is small, but so was the Lao People's party, which consisted of little more than its own central committee. It was enough, however, in Laos, to provide the skeleton around which to build the Pathet Lao movement which now gets its muscle from North Vietnam's army.

Should the movement be launched in Cambodia, where there are now reported to be at least 40,000 North Vietnamese troops and many Viet Cong guerrillas, the Cambodian army would probably come out a poor second without substantial outside help.

Gen. Lon Nol, who overthrew Sihanouk and installed a new chief of state, is reported to be relying on the assumption that the ousted ruler has support only among the peasants, with no organizational base. This could be a costly assumption.

The only source of help for the new Cambodian regime at the moment is the United States. Washington, far from wanting to become involved in a third war in Indochina, has been trying to extricate itself gradually from the other two in Vietnam and Laos. Popular opinion in the United States would be unlikely to welcome widened American involvement. People who worry about such matters note an increasing mood of American isolationism, a growing American unwillingness to commit the country any deeper either to policing or to solving the world's problems.

This can mean that if Sihanouk successfully mounts his movement, Cambodia is foredoomed to fall into the Communist camp. More than that, it can mean that barring the deeper involvement that Washington wants to avoid.

TOGETHERNESS PAYS

SAN JOSE, Calif. (AP) — A sure-fire way of cementing marriages is doing crossword puzzle contests with your spouse.

So says Mrs. Shirley Sternad who recently won first prize, $12,850, in the American Holiday Association national crossword puzzle contest. Her husband Nicholas helped her with the puzzle.

"Instead of going out nights we stayed home and worked on the puzzle," Mrs. Sternad said. "Couples would do their marriages much good by doing a joint effort. They wouldn't have to argue about where to go at night," said Mrs. Sternad.

EDMUND JAMES DEVLIN

Gang Chief on FBI List

WASHINGTON--Edmund James Devlin, a reputed Connecticut organized crime gang leader who is charged with federal crimes including armed bank robbery, has been added to the FBI's list of 10 Most Wanted Fugitives.

Devlin and two accomplices allegedly entered the Fairfield County Trust Company, Connecticut and Richards Avenues, Norwalk, Connecticut, on the morning of January 9, 1969, wearing rubber Halloween face masks and carrying pistols. The gunmen seized $106,333, stuffed the loot into a white laundry bag and escaped in a stolen getaway car. Two of the alleged bandits have been taken into custody, but Devlin, who has reputedly been active in numerous criminal activities including gambling and loan-sharking, remains at large. A Federal warrant charging him with bank robbery was issued at New Haven, Connecticut, on September 10, 1969.

Devlin is also charged in a Federal warrant issued at New Haven on October 7, 1969, with interstate transportation of stolen property and conspiracy, resulting from his alleged involvement in the cashing of a large number of stolen money orders. He had been indicted for these offenses in December, 1968, and released on bond but subsequently failed to appear for a court hearing in September, 1969, following which his $50,000 bond was revoked and a warrant for his arrest issued.

He has been suspected of involvement in additional bank robberies in Connecticut and has reportedly been involved in gangland warfare with an underworld rival.

Well known in underworld circles, Devlin was first convicted in 1950 in Connecticut when he was given a one-year sentence for breaking and entering and theft. Following a 1951 arrest in Connecticut, he was given an indefinite sentence in the Connecticut State Reformatory for attempted robbery with violence and simple assault. In 1956 he was given a seven - to twelve - year term at the Connecticut State Penitentiary, Wethersfield, upon conviction for armed robbery, and in October, 1961, he was paroled. In February, 1964, he was returned to the penitentiary for parole violation and in June, 1966, was again released on parole.

In March, 1967, upon conviction in New Hampshire for intent to cheat and defraud, he was given a one-year to 18-month sentence and was paroled in September, 1967.

A white American who was born at New Haven, Connecticut, on December 27, 1933, Devlin is 5'6" to 5'7" tall, weighs 190 to 215 pounds, has a heavy build, light complexion, blue eyes and light brown hair. He has a scar on his left wrist and the tatoos of "DOT" on his upper right arm and "THERESA" on his upper left arm. He has been employed as a bricklayer, car salesman, factory worker, ironworker, laborer and trucker.

He reportedly has a quiet manner, dresses conservatively in expensive clothes, enjoys eating and frequenting high class restaurants and night clubs, drinks scotch whisky, smokes cigarettes, likes to attend horse races and baseball games, and abhors manual labor.

Devlin is sought for a bank robbery in which handguns were used and may be accompanied by Thomas Francis Viola, Jr., another Federal fugitive who is charged with interstate flight to avoid prosecution for murder. Both should be considered armed and very dangerous.

Anyone with information concerning Devlin, or Viola, should immediately contact the nearest office of the FBI, the telephone number of which may be found on the first page of local telephone directories.

Moon Dust Coming to Columbia

COLUMBIA - The National Aeronautics and Space Administration has notified Dr. Walter D. Keller, University of Missouri professor of geology, that a vial of "moon dust," the first of two samples to be used in experiments designed to investgate the weathering effects of the earth's atmosphere on lunar materials, should arrive in Columbia in the near future.

The University curators have accepted a NASA grant that includes the samples, as well as funds to carry out the research for which Dr. Keller will be prinicpal investigator.

Dr. Keller says if the sample arrives in a transparent vial, the "moon dust" will be put on public display for a short itme, but, if it arrives in a non-transparent container, the sample will not be displayed in order to avoid altering the atmosphere within he container.

If the dust comes in suitable form, Dr. Keller will announce the exhibition time after its arrival.

Scooped from he moon by the crew of Apollo 12, the dust is part of the contingency sample shoveled from the Ocean of Storms immediately after landing, in the event a quick departure had been necissitated.

Dr. Keller says the sample is well-suited to his experiments, and he considers himself lucky since only a small amount of dust was retrieved. Most of the Apollo 12 samples were of the rock variety, and Dr. Keller expects the second sample, which will arrive at an undertermined future date, will be of this variety.

The fine-grained lunar material is described by Dr. Keller as similar to the product of weathering of massive, solid rocks on earth or, as scientists call it, "regolith." On earth regolith is formed chiefly through the chemical reaction of rocks with water, oxygen, carbon dioxide, and acids present in soil, and by the action of mechanical forces on rocks.

Through these processes, the rocks are reduced to boulders, gravel, sand, clay and dissolved substances. Weathering also unlocks plant-nutrient substances from the rocks and makes them available to plants and to man. Unlike earth the moon lacks sufficient gravitational pull to hold water vapor and atmospheric gases; thus moon rocks have not been exposed to weathering as it occurs here. Dr. Keller believes this may be the greatest single difference between the earth and lunar surfaces.

In the experiment Dr. Keller, who will be principle investigator, and his associate investigator, Dr. Wen Hsing Huang, a post doctoral fellow in geology at UMC, will pulvarize the moon dust and dissolve it in distilled (rain) water and in various acids representative of those in soils. Among the latter will be acetic acid which is present in household vinegar and salicylic acid which is a component of ordinary aspirin.

After waiting an appropriate time period, Dr. Keller and his associate will analyse the solutions by X-ray and other techniques in order to discover what differences caused by the "weathering" process can be observed.

Dr. Keller says since the experimental process will require extensive time and because tight security precautions are necessary when working with the NASA samples, the dust will be exhibited only once. He says the experiment will take approximately six months to complete.

Long-Range Effects of Sihanouk Fall Not Cheery

By WILLIAM L. RYAN
AP Special Correspondent

At first blush it might have seemed to some Americans that the overthrow of Prince Norodom Sihanouk in Cambodia was good news. But the more they study it, the gloomier the prospects tend to look for all of Indochina, including Laos and Vietnam.

Prince Sihanouk, from his place of exile in Red China, has called for a "liberation army" to do battle with the men in Phnom Penh who ousted him last week. It is no idle boast. Sihanouk has a good chance of making a comback and thus rendering the over-all situation in Southeast Asia a good deal worse than it was to begin with.

Sihanouk won't need much strength on his own if he is going to get what he calls the help of "brotherly nations." The pattern in Cambodia easily could be made to resemble what happened in neighboring Laos, now torn in two by a North Vietnamese invasion to support a so-called liberation movement.

The Red Khmer — Cambodia's Communist party—already exists in that country as the framework for the "liberation" movement. It is small, but so was the Lao People's party, which consisted of little more than its own central committee. It was enough, however, in Laos, to provide the skeleton around which to build the Pathet Lao movement which now gets its muscle from North Vietnam's army.

Should the movement be launched in Cambodia, where there are now reported to be at least 40,000 North Vietnamese troops and many Viet Cong guerrillas, the Cambodian army would probably come out a poor second without substantial outside help.

Gen. Lcn Nol, who overthrew Sihanouk and installed a new chief of state, is reported to be relying on the assumption that the ousted ruler has support only among the peasants, with no organizational base. This could be a costly assumption.

The only source of help for the new Cambodian regime at the moment is the United States. Washington, far from wanting to become involved in a third war in Indochina, has been trying to extricate itself gradually from the other two in Vietnam and Laos. Popular opinion in the United States would be unlikely to welcome widened American involvement. People who worry about such matters note an increasing mood of American isolationism, a growing American unwillingness to commit the country any deeper either to policing or to solving the world's problems.

In his State of the Union Address delivered Jan. 22, 1970, President Richard Nixon said:

"The major immediate goal of our foreign policy is to bring an end to the war in Vietnam in a way that our generation will be remembered, not so much as the generation that suffered in war, but more for the fact that we had the courage and character to win the kind of a just peace that the next generation was able to keep. We are making progress toward that goal."

Secretary of Defense Laird Outlines New Vietnam Policies

The following remarks were made by Secretary of Defense Melvin R. Laird in a speech before the California State Chamber of Commerce, January 15.

"We have embarked on a new policy to achieve the objective which our nation has been pursuing in Vietnam. There are some, it is true, who say it is not new. Yet, prior years, the number of American troops in Vietnam went up and up and up. Now it is going down. Clearly there is an important difference between increasing American forces in Vietnam—and reducing them. There is an important difference between a policy that places the major combat responsibility on our GIs—and one that places that responsibility on the Vietnamese.

Because the Nixon administration has energetically concentrated on improving the training and equipment of the forces of Vietnam and on assisting the South Vietnamese to develop a more stable society, we have been able to announce since last June reduction of the American troop authorization ceiling for Vietnam by 115,000 men. We have been able to turn over to the South Vietnamese an ever greater share of the responsibility for defense of their country."

KERSHNER-ROWE COMMENTARY

Howard Kershner Edward Rowe

Communists Seek Collapse C American Morals

According to Dr. Gallup there a minority consisting about three or four millic adults who seem to be cor pletely obsessed with sex. F this reason practically 99 out 100 novels published today er phasizes the sexual element.

Gallup puts the blame square on the publishers. It appea that books are now being pu lished for this minority of 3 4 million sex-obsessed adults.

The problem is simply th publishers ignore the majorit and print novels slanted to sex-oriented minority.

Freedom rests on a moral fou dation. Only moral men can free. Morality, in turn, derive from religious faith. The sourc of all goodness is God. Destro faith in God and moral stand ards crumble. That's why Com munists know that they mus destroy religion or fail. Con versely, they know that if the succeed in destroying religior moral standards will not lon survive.

When General William F Dean was released from a Korea Communist prison camp, Georg Schuyler quotes the Chinese phy siologists who had been tryin to break him as saying, "Gen eral, don't feel bad about leavin us. You know, we will soon b with you. We are going to des troy the moral character of th generation of your young Amer icans, and when we have finishe you will have nothing with whic to defend yourselves against us.'

Pornographic literature, early extreme sex education in th public schools, disrespect for th flag, the elimination of praye and bible reading from ou schools, and the doctrine that on may disregard and defy the law of our country if he does no agree with them, are some o the tactics the Communists ar using to destroy the present gen eration of young Americans. I we do not rally to their rescue teach them reverence for Go and for the laws of our country the Communists will surely suc ceed in their endeavor to destroy our civilization.

Easter Is Important Day; Look For True Meaning

EASTER IS A TIME of colored eggs and singing "Here Comes Peter Cottontail," and it is a time to bring out one's spring wardrobe and to welcome in the warm weather, but Easter is also a Christian's most important holiday

Sunday commemorates the death of God's son, Jesus Christ, and the eternal life His sacrifice gives us. Yet most of us are more involved in the commercial aspects of the Easter season.

The radio advertises various Easter egg hunts to be conducted with the grand prize being to find the "gold egg." The business districts in all cities have filled their display windows with soft, plush bunnies and ideas for a new spring wardrobe. These are the symbols that are associated with Easter.

What are the true symbols of Easter? What is Easter and what should it mean to each person? Easter is the season when each person remembers Christ who died on the cross and rose on the third day.

Religiously speaking, the white lily and the cross are the real symbols of this season.

We notice that the attendence in church is at its highest peak during the Christman and Easter seasons. Are the reasons for the stuffed pews ones of guilt or of realization?

Each of us has a chance this Easter season to receive good news. The news may not be one of easily-earned material riches, but it may be one which is filled with the riches of life. After all, don't the riches of life rate highly above those of materialistic value?

If we are patient and search through the tangled grass of modern day commercialism, we can find the greatest treasure of all — the true meaning of Easter.

Which would you rather see upon opening your newspaper on Easter morning, which would be the best news – "John Doe Finds Golden Egg," or "World Finds Christ?"

Voters Must Vote 'Yes' On Tax Revision Law

ON TUESDAY April 7 voters will go to the polls in a special election to vote on the passage of the Missouri Income Tax Revision Law, and it should be brought to the attention of students and parents in the Sikeston area that unless this law is passed the Sikeston schools will suffer and the quality of education in the Sikeston area will be lowered.

This bill is extremely important to every Missouri citizen because if the state lessens its financial aid to state supported schools it has a damaging effect on the educational opportunities of the students.

A good education cannot and must not be denied to any student, and this is why the Income Tax Revision Law must be approved by the majority of the citizens on April 7. Without the extra money this law calls for, the schools cannot operate as effectively, and therefore the quality of education in Missouri will be greatly decreased.

Sikeston will be affected more than most area schools because it depends more heavily upon state aid than other schools. If the law is not approval, the Sikeston schools will receive a drastic cut in aid and many activities and educational aids will be lessened or eliminated.

Students must realize that a priority list has been compiled by the board of education. This list is commonly termed as a "cut lits" because it concerns activities and special offerings that will be cut if the referendum fails at the polls.

Library services, modern equipment including books, school sports and other extra-curricular activities, and the journalistic offerings may be cut or eliminated to save money so that basic public education can continue in Sikeston. Do the students want this? The answer is a definite no!

One of the main arguments against Proposition No. 1 of the referendum is that it will raise taxes in Missouri. This idea is not altogether true. This bill is a reform measure only, and not a tax hike. In fact, the burden of individual taxation will be lessened. Corporations and people in higher income bracket will be paying more of their share, as it should be.

A majority of the taxpayers will either pay less tax or not any more tax. The measure will provide only a modest increase for the remainder of the taxpayers, who will be mainly those in the financial bracket of $15,000 and above.

It is estimated that for a one-year period it will increase state revenue by $70,000,000. At least 27 million of these dollars would be paid by corporations, and 43 million by individuals.

Therefore, it is ridiculous to believe that this bill will raise taxes to the point of being unbearable. It will only reform the present tax laws and put the heavier burden where it belongs. Without this raise Missouri cannot maintain the status quo and there will be a frightening lack of money.

Senator Richard Southern, Monroe City, has said that the state will need four years to get back to the place it is today if the measure fails. Schools will take at least this long, if not longer.

In other words, either the citizens act now and maintain stability with progress, or they will suffer extreme set backs.

State officials have indicated that unless Proposition No. 1 is approved, schools, instead of receiving an additional $35,000,000 in state support, would receive $19,000,000 less than they received this year.

So it is imperative to everyone that this bill is approved. Students must apply pressure to their parents and inform them of the consequences if this bill fails.

On April 7 go to the polls, and vote YES on Proposition No. 1 of the referendum, or years of progress will be lost

Voters Must Vote 'Yes' On Tax Revision Law

ON TUESDAY April 7 voters will go to the polls in a special election to vote on the passage of the Missouri Income Tax Revision Law, and it should be brought to the attention of students and parents in the Sikeston area that unless this law is passed the Sikeston schools will suffer and the quality of education in the Sikeston area will be lowered.

This bill is extremely important to every Missouri citizen because if the state lessens its financial aid to state supported schools it has a damaging effect on the educational opportunities of the students.

A good education cannot and must not be denied to any student, and this is why the Income Tax Revision Law must be approved by the majority of the citizens on April 7. Without the extra money this law calls for, the schools cannot operate as effectively, and therefore the quality of education in Missouri will be greatly decreased.

Sikeston will be affected more than most area schools because it depends more heavily upon state aid than other schools. If the law is not approval, the Sikeston schools will receive a drastic cut in aid and many activities and educational aids will be lessened or eliminated.

Students must realize that a priority list has been compiled by the board of education. This list is commonly termed as a "cut lits" because it concerns activities and special offerings that will be cut if the referendum fails at the polls.

Library services, modern equipment including books, school sports and other extra-curricular activities, and the journalistic offerings may be cut or eliminated to save money so that basic public education can continue in Sikeston. Do the students want this? The answer is a definite no!

One of the main arguments against Proposition No. 1 of the referendum is that it will raise taxes in Missouri. This idea is not altogether true. This bill is a reform measure only, and not a tax hike. In fact, the burden of individual taxation will be lessened. Corporations and people in higher income bracket will be paying more of their share, as it should be.

A majority of the taxpayers will either pay less tax or not any more tax. The measure will provide only a modest increase for the remainder of the taxpayers, who will be mainly those in the financial bracket of $15,000 and above.

It is estimated that for a one-year period it will increase state revenue by $70.000.000. At least 27 million of these dollars would be paid by corporations, and 43 million by individuals.

Therefore, it is ridiculous to believe that this bill will raise taxes to the point of being unbearable. It will only reform the present tax laws and put the heavier burden where it belongs. Without this raise Missouri cannot maintain the status quo and there will be a frightening lack of money.

Senator Richard Southern, Monroe City, has said that the state will need four years to get back to the place it is today if the measure fails. Schools will take at least this long, if not longer.

In other words, either the citizens act now and maintain stability with progress, or they will suffer extreme set backs.

State officials have indicated that unless Proposition No. 1 is approved, schools, instead of receiving an additional $35,000,000 in state support, would receive $19,000,000 less than they received this year.

So it is imperative to everyone that this bill is approved. Students must apply pressure to their parents and inform them of the consequences if this bill fails.

On April 7 go to the polls, and vote YES on Proposition No. 1 of the referendum, or years of progress will be lost

SIKESTON HIGH SCHOOL STUDENTS who were selected to play with all-district band at the teachers meeting in Cape Girardeau next week are (sitting, left to right) Emily Bruce, Anne Heckemeyer, and Jan Sargent. Those standing are Tom Lemmons and Rachel Ardrey. Patti Stamp was absent when the picture was snapped.

MEXICAN SUNFLOWER

Brighten your late summer garden with the dahlia-like flowers of Tithonia, Torch.

Imagine grenadine-red flowers 4 inches in diameter on 6 foot plants with luxuriant foliage! That's what you'll produce from seeds of Tithonia, Torch.

Tithonia is a native of Mexico and Central America, long known in its wild form. It has been called Inca's flower and inca's gold as well as Mexican sunflower.

The improved variety, Torch, has larger flowers of a more brilliant color than the wild form.

This plant can be used for a background of green or for a one-year hedge. The flowers open in August and September and are excellent for cutting.

MEXICAN SUNFLOWER

Brighten your late summer garden with the dahlia-like flowers of Tithonia, Torch.

Imagine grenadine-red flowers 4 inches in diameter on 6 foot plants with luxuriant foliage! That's what you'll produce from seeds of Tithonia, Torch.

Tithonia is a native of Mexico and Central America, long known in its wild form. It has been called Inca's flower and Inca's gold as well as Mexican sunflower.

The improved variety, Torch, has larger flowers of a more brilliant color than the wild form.

This plant can be used for a background of green or for a one-year hedge. The flowers open in August and September and are excellent for cutting.

If You Were the Judge

Trip with Racketeer Costs Detective Job

By Jack Strauss, LL.B.

Detective Slezy went on a two-week European jaunt with Nicely Nelson, a well reputed racketeer. Upon his return, he was charged with conduct unbecoming a police officer, for taking a vacation with so unrespectable a character as Nicely, and was instructed to turn in his shield. Insisting that he was a victim of guilt by associationand that he had been a 100 per cent pure cop at all times, the detective unhappily turned in his badge and then demanded its return in court.

"My conscience is clear," he insisted in court. "I did nothing wrong and it's not Nicely's fault that he isn't respectable. After all, how can you expect a man to be respectable when he has to do business with the kind of people who will do business with a racketeer."

"Whether your conscience is clear or not," was the answer, "in these days of public suspicion you made a farce out of the force by being so friendly in public with a racketeer. You shoulda' aughta had your head examined."

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you give Sleazy back his badge?

This is how the judge ruled: NO! The judge held that a police department must maintain the respect of the public without which the department would become incompetent and demoralized. By taking a trip to Europe with a racketeer, concluded the judge, Detective Sleazy should have know it would adversely reflect upon the police department and subject it to desgrace, ridicule and disrespect. He had placed a blotch on the police department. (Based upon a 1964 Illinois Supreme Court decision)

Survey Shows College Frosh Dislike Protests

ROLLA, What is today's college freshman really like?

To find out the American Council of Education made a national survey of incoming freshmen last fall including almost 1000 at the University of Missouri-Rolla. Results of the survey (both nationally and on the Rolla campus) have a few surprises for those who look on students as long-haired radicals whose ides of education is to take over a few campus buildings.

A UMR the "typical" freshman is a B- or better student (82.7 percent) who thinks colleges are too lax on protests (78.9 percent), has little intention of protesting himself on military policy, race or college administrative policies (over 98 percent) and is aware of his parents' concern and aspirations for him (over 97 percent). (Nationally no more than 8 percent expect to protest, but only 58 percent agreed that colleges were too lax on protests, About the same percentage as at Rolla recognized their parents' concern).

Rolla freshmen were pretty certain about their plans for the future. A total of 71.5 percent were so sure UMR was the university for them that they didn't apply to any other college. (Nationally only 46.2 percent applied to just one college). Just 5.7 percent at Rolla thought they might transfer to another college and only .1 percent foresaw the strong possibility of dropping out of college permanently.

They were even more definite about their choices of major subjects and career plans. Only 3.7 percent were undecided on a probable career, compared to a national percentage of 12.8. As might be expected at UMR (which specializes in engineering and science), most expect to major in engineering (78.7 percent, including 19.5 percent of the women); physical sciences (6.9 percent) or mathematics or statistics (3.5 percent).

At this point, about 67 percent of the UMR beginners plan to continue their educations beyond the four-year undergraduate program (compared to 59.7 percent nationally). A total of 44 34cent expect to get the M.S. degree and 22.6 percent the doctorate.

The new crop of students also displayed unusual financial independence. Almost 40 percent at Rolla said that their major source of financial support during their freshman year would be form personal savings or employment (compared to 24.3 percent nationally). Half were mainly dependent on their parents. Others are attending college on repayable loans or grants and scholarships. Although 68 percent expressed some concern about financing their educations, it was a major concern to only 11.9 percent.

Based on answers to a variety of questions, here is a partial profile of the 1969 UMR freshman:

He is 18 or 19 (95 percent). His likely to be a male (92 percent, although the 8 percent female enrollment is the highest in UMR history).

He was a good student in high school. A total of 70 percent were in the top quarter of their graduating classes, 34.4 percent in the top tenth.

He probably comes from between 100 and 500 miles from Rolla (63 percent and 32 percent live closer). He is likely to be from a moderate size town or city (24 percent) or suburb (31.9). The rest are fairly evenly divided between small towns, large cities and rural areas.

His father may be in one of many lines of work, but chances are better than one in four that he is a businessman, one in six that he is a skilled worker, one in ten that he is an engineer and the same that he is a semi-skilled worker.

On what he considers important, today's Rolla freshman ranks these high: developing a philosophy of life (77.2 percent), be an authority in my field (70.2 percent), becoming very well off financially (62.2 percent--About the same percent feel that the value of a college education is chiefly monetary). Despite the fact that most think their views are similar to others (72.4 percent), a majority (63.7 percent) think it important to have friends different from themselves. The beginning UMR college student votes for federal involvement in pollution control (93.8 percent), crime prevention (91.6 percent), consumer protection (72.5 percent) and elimination of poverty (66 percent). Two-thirds also believe in federal involvement in controling student activists compared with 44.6 percent nationally.

Over two-thirds at UMR think courts protect the criminal too much, four-fifths would legalize abortion and two-fifths would abolish capital punishment. Only 13.4 percent believe that marijuana should be legalized (compared to 28.8 nationally) and over half think military service should be voluntary.

Politically, almost half of the students describe themselves as middle of the roaders and the rest are almost evenly divided between liberals and conservatives. Most apparently expect college to polarize their views. In four years only 36.7 percent expect to be in the middle group. Eight percent anticipate that they will be more liberal and five percent more conservative. Whatever their politics, half think keeping up with political affairs is very important.

Comparison of this year's data with that of previous years reveals a few interesting changes in attitude among UMR's freshmen. In the past two years, the percentage of those who felt colleges were too lax on protests rose from 52 in 1967 and 69 in 1968 to 78.9 in 1969. Those favoring a volunteer army rose from 33.2 percent in 1968 to 53.5 percent this year. And the percentage who felt it was extremely important to help others increased this year from 42.9 to 54.6.

Natalie Wood and Dyan Cannon, as young-marrieds involved in today's sexual revolution, are starred with Robert Culp and Elliott Gould in "Bob & Carol & Ted & Alice." The comedy is a Frankovich production in Technicolor for Columbia Pictures release. Paul Mazursky directed and Larry Tucker produced "Bob & Carol & Ted & Alice."

If You Were the Judge

Trip with Racketeer Costs Detective Job

By Jack Strauss, LL.B.

Detective Slezy went on a two-week European jaunt with Nicely Nelson, a well reputed racketeer. Upon his return, he was charged with conduct unbecoming a police officer, for taking a vacation with so unrespectable a character as Nicely, and was instructed to turn in his shield. Insisting that he was a victim of guilt by associationand that he had been a 100 per cent pure cop at all times, the detective unhappily turned in his badge and then demanded its return in court.

"My conscience is clear," he insisted in court. "I did nothing wrong and it's not Nicely's fault that he isn't respectable. After all, how can you expect a man to be respectable when he has to do business with the kind of people who will do business with a racketeer."

"Whether your conscience is clear or not," was the answer, "in these days of public suspicion you made a farce out of the force by being so friendly in public with a racketeer. You shoulda' aughta had your head examined."

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you give Sleazy back his badge?

This is how the judge ruled: NO! The judge held that a police department must maintain the respect of the public without which the department would become incompetent and demoralized. By taking a trip to Europe with a racketeer, concluded the judge, Detective Sleazy should have know it would adversely reflect upon the police department and subject it to desgrace, ridicule and disrespect. He had placed a blotch on the police department. (Based upon a 1964 Illinois Supreme Court decision)

Survey Shows College Frosh Dislike Protests

ROLLA, What is today's college freshman really like?

To find out the American Council of Education made a national survey of incoming freshmen last fall including almost 1000 at the University of Missouri-Rolla. Results of the survey (both nationally and on the Rolla campus) have a few surprises for those who look on students as long-haired radicals whose idea of education is to take over a few campus buildings.

A UMR the "typical" freshman is a B- or better student (82.7 percent) who thinks colleges are too lax on protests (78.9 percent), has little intention of protesting himself on military policy, race or college administrative policies (over 98 percent) and is aware of his parents' concern and aspirations for him (over 97 percent). (Nationally no more than 8 percent expect to protest, but only 58 percent agreed that colleges were too lax on protests. About the same percentage as at Rolla recognized their parents' concern).

Rolla freshmen were pretty certain about their plans for the future. A total of 71.5 percent were so sure UMR was the university for them that they didn't apply to any other college. (Nationally only 46.2 percent applied to just one college). Just 5.7 percent at Rolla thought they might transfer to another college and only .1 percent foresaw the strong possibility of dropping out of college permanently.

They were even more definite about their choices of major subjects and career plans. Only 3.7 percent were undecided on a probable career, compared to a national percentage of 12.8. As might be expected at UMR (which specializes in engineering and science), most expect to major in engineering (78.7 percent, including 19.5 percent of the women); physical sciences (6.9 percent) or mathematics or statistics (3.5 percent).

At this point, about 67 percent of the UMR beginners plan to continue their educations beyond the four-year undergraduate program (compared to 59.7 percent nationally). A total of 44 34cent expect to get the M.S. degree and 22.6 percent the doctorate.

The new crop of students also displayed unusual financial independence. Almost 40 percent at Rolla said that their major source of financial support during their freshman year would be form personal savings or employment (compared to 24.3 percent nationally). Half were mainly dependent on their parents. Others are attending college on repayable loans or grants and scholarships. Although 68 percent expressed some concern about financing their educations, it was a major concern to only 11.9 percent.

Based on answers to a variety of questions, here is a partial profile of the 1969 UMR freshman:

He is 18 or 19 (95 percent). His likely to be a male (92 percent, although the 8 percent female enrollment is the highest in UMR history).

His father may be in one of many lines of work, but chances are better than one in four that he is a businessman, one in six that he is a skilled worker, one in ten that he is an engineer and the same that he is a semi-skilled worker.

Over two-thirds at UMR think courts protect the criminal too much, four-fifths would legalize abortion and two-fifths would abolish capital punishment. Only 13.4 percent believe that marijuana should be legalized (compared to 28.8 nationally) and over half think military service should be voluntary.

If You Were the Judge

Trip with Racketeer Costs Detective Job

By Jack Strauss, LL.B.

Detective Slezy went on a two-week European jaunt with Nicely Nelson, a well reputed racketeer. Upon his return, he was charged with conduct unbecoming a police officer, for taking a vacation with so unrespectable a character as Nicely, and was instructed to turn in his shield. Insisting that he was a victim of guilt by associationand that he had been a 100 per cent pure cop at all times, the detective unhappily turned in his badge and then demanded its return in court.

"My conscience is clear," he insisted in court. "I did nothing wrong and it's not Nicely's fault that he isn't respectable. After all how can you expect a man to be respectable when he has to do business with the kind of people who will do business with a racketeer."

"Whether your conscience is clear or not," was the answer, "in these days of public suspicion you made a farce out of the force by being so friendly in public with a racketeer. You shoulda' aughta had your head examined."

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you give Sleazy back his badge?

This is how the judge ruled: NO! The judge held that a police department must maintain the respect of the public without which the department would become incompetent and demoralized. By taking a trip to Europe with a racketeer, concluded the judge, Detective Sleazy should have know it would adversely reflect upon the police department and subject it to desgrace, ridicule and disrespect. He had placed a blotch on the police department. (Based upon a 1964 Illinois Supreme Court decision)

Survey Shows College Frosh Dislike Protests

ROLLA, What is today's college freshman really like?

To find out the American Council of Education made a national survey of incoming freshmen last fall including almost 1000 at the University of Missouri-Rolla. Results of the survey (both nationally and on the Rolla campus) have a few surprises for those who look on students as long-haired radicals whose idea of education is to take over a few campus buildings.

A UMR the "typical" freshman is a B- or better student (82.7 percent) who thinks colleges are too lax on protests (78.9 percent), has little intention of protesting himself on military policy, race or college administrative policies (over 98 percent) and is aware of his parents' concern and aspirations for him (over 97 percent). (Nationally no more than 8 percent expect to protest, but only 58 percent agreed that colleges were too lax on protests, About the same percentage as at Rolla recognized their parents' concern).

Rolla freshmen were pretty certain about their plans for the future. A total of 71.5 percent were so sure UMR was the university for them that they didn't apply to any other college. (Nationally only 46.2 percent applied to just one college). Just 5.7 percent at Rolla thought they might transfer to another college and only .1 percent foresaw the strong possibility of dropping out of college permanently.

They were even more definite about their choices of major subjects and career plans. Only 3.7 percent were undecided on a probable career, compared to a national percentage of 12.8. As might be expected at UMR (which specializes in engineering and science), most expect to major in engineering (78.7 percent, including 19.5 percent of the women); physical sciences (6.9 percent) or mathematics or statistics (3.5 percent).

At this point, about 67 percent of the UMR beginners plan to continue their educations beyond the four-year undergraduate program (compared to 59.7 percent nationally). A total of 44 34cent expect to get the M.S. degree and 22.6 percent the doctorate.

The new crop of students also displayed unusual financial independence. Almost 40 percent at Rolla said that their major source of financial support during their freshman year would be form personal savings or employment (compared to 24.3 percent nationally). Half were mainly dependent on their parents. Others are attending college on repayable loans or grants and scholarships. Although 68 percent expressed some concern about financing their educations, it was a major concern to only 11.9 percent.

Based on answers to a variety of questions, here is a partial profile of the 1969 UMR freshman:

He is 18 or 19 (95 percent). His likely to be a male (92 percent, although the 8 percent female enrollment is the highest in UMR history).

He was a good student in high school. A total of 70 percent were in the top quarter of their graduating classes, 34.4 percent in the top tenth.

He probably comes from between 100 and 500 miles from Rolla (63 percent and 32 percent live closer). He is likely to be from a moderate size town or city (24 percent) or suburb (31.9). The rest are fairly evenly divided between small towns, large cities and rural areas.

His father may be in one of many lines of work, but chances are better than one in four that he is a businessman, one in six that he is a skilled worker, one in ten that he is an engineer and the same that he is a semi-skilled worker.

On what he considers important, today's Rolla freshman ranks these high: developing a philosophy of life (77.2 percent), be an authority in my field (70.2 percent), becoming very well off financially (62.2 percent--About the same percent feel that the value of a college education is chiefly monetary). Despite the fact that most think their views are similar to others (72.4 percent), a majority (63.7 percent) think it important to have friends different from themselves. The beginning UMR college student votes for federal involvement in pollution control (93.8 percent), crime prevention (91.6 percent), consumer protection (72.5 percent) and elimination of poverty (66 percent). Two-thirds also believe in federal involvement in controling student activists compared with 44.6 percent nationally.

Over two-thirds at UMR think courts protect the criminal too much, four-fifths would legalize abortion and two-fifths would abolish capital punishment. Only 13.4 percent believe that marijuana should be legalized (compared to 28.8 nationally) and over half think military service should be voluntary.

Politically, almost half of the students describe themselves as middle of the roaders and the rest are almost evenly divided between liberals and conservatives. Most apparently expect college to polarize their views. In four years only 36.7 percent expect to be in the middle group. Eight percent anticipate that they will be more liberal and five percent more conservative. Whatever their politics, half think keeping up with political affairs is very important.

Comparison of this year's data with that of previous years reveals a few interesting changes in attitude among UMR's freshmen. In the past two years, the percentage of those who felt colleges were too lax on protests rose from 52 in 1967 and 69 in 1968 to 78.9 in 1969. Those favoring a volunteer army rose from 33.2 percent in 1968 to 53.5 percent this year. And the percentage who felt it was extremely important to help others increased this year from 42.9 to 54.6.

Natalie Wood and Dyan Cannon, as young-marrieds involved in today's sexual revolution, are starred with Robert Culp and Elliott Gould in "Bob & Carol & Ted & Alice." The comedy is a Frankovich production in Technicolor for Columbia Pictures release. Paul Mazursky directed and Larry Tucker produced "Bob & Carol & Ted & Alice."

Trip with Racketeer Costs Detective Job

By Jack Strauss, LL.B.

Detective Slezy went on a two-week European jaunt with Nicely Nelson, a well reputed racketeer. Upon his return, he was charged with conduct unbecoming a police officer, for taking a vacation with so unrespectable a character as Nicely, and was instructed to turn in his shield. Insisting that he was a victim of guilt by associationand that he had been a 100 per cent pure cop at all times, the detective unhappily turned in his badge and then demanded its return in court.

"My conscience is clear," he insisted in court. "I did nothing wrong and it's not Nicely's fault that he isn't respectable. After all, how can you expect a man to be respectable when he has to do business with the kind of people who will do business with a racketeer."

"Whether your conscience is clear or not," was the answer, "in these days of public suspicion you made a farce out of the force by being so friendly in public with a racketeer. You shoulda' aughta had your head examined."

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you give Sleazy back his badge?

This is how the judge ruled: NO! The judge held that a police department must maintain the respect of the public without which the department would become incompetent and demoralized. By taking a trip to Europe with a racketeer, concluded the judge, Detective Sleazy should have know it would adversely reflect upon the police department and subject it to desgrace, ridicule and disrespect. He had placed a blotch on the police department. (Based upon a 1964 Illinois Supreme Court decision)

TV Reruns Popping up By Leaps

NEW YORK (AP) — Spring has scarcely made its debut, but already it is beginning to look like summer in televisionland.

By the end of this week a baker's dozen series will have gone into re-runs—and that doesn't count theatrical films on their second trip out. By the end of another three weeks, just about every series will be an oft-told tale.

If the TV season seems shorter than it used to, it's because it IS shorter—almost three months shorter than 10 or 15 years ago. Once the usual series was committed to turn out 39 weeks of shows. Today many series make no more than 24 programs, depending on a couple of pre-emptions of their time period to fill out the six month run.

Why re-runs? Network executives say it is a matter of economics. If each episode of a series costs, say, $100,000, a second time out on the network amortizes that production cost. It may not cut the average to $50,000—there are the re-run fees to pay performers—but it helps.

CBS' special, "Fight For Life" on Tuesday night was an unusual film study of a tribe of Eskimos at their northern Canada winter encampment where in 30 and 40 below zero temperatures they hunt seal below Arctic sea ice.

It was an hour which viewers with central heating and handy stoves shivered over, watching these hardy nomads in bitter cold hunting in primitive fashion. In contrast there was their warm family life, the sharing, the laughter and their happy times together.

The Netsilik Eskimos lived close together in igloos which were never above freezing. The men hunted in groups and the seal was their staff of life. They ate its flesh, tanned its skin for clothing, burned its blubber for cooking. A harpooned seal provided food for the group for several days. Scenes of the catch and the ritualistic butchering of the sea mammal were pretty grisly, particularly in color.

Since the film was shot five years ago, the Netsiliks have been established in permanent settlements and no longer pursue the caribou during the short summer and the seal in the long Arctic night.

Elizabeth Taylor and Burton seemed more relaxed and less "on" when interviewed by Charles Collingwood on CBS' "60 Minutes" than during a much longer interview last week with David Frost.

The CBS interview was shot at Miss Taylor's parents' home in Los Angeles. Both interviews inevitably covered much the same areas.

More interesting were Harry Reasoner's report on a recent visit to military installations in Israel and—closer to home and the American pocketbook—a report on the ineffectiveness of today's automobile bumpers.

Hayti Youth Hits Fence at 120 MPH

CARUTHERSVILLE--A small, well enforced, brick wall, constructed in the front yard of a Ward Avenue home belonging to Cliff Smith which was built to keep cars from flying through the home, has been demolished once again. A car, driven at a high rate of speed, crashed through the wall at 5:20 a.m. Sunday.

Caruthersville Police identified the driver of the 1966 Buick as Ricky Swan, 17, of 807 East Moore in Hayti. Swan, who was driving east on Highway U, told police that he was going 120 mph. Highway U ends directly in front of the Smith home.

According to Caruthersville Police Chief E. R. "Doc" Stone, Swan will be charged with careless and reckless driving while drinking. He stated that the boy was in the Pemiscot County Memorial Hospital in Hayti with minor chin and mouth injuries.

Although the fence was demolished, the home was not touched by the vehicle. However, on one occasion a vehicle plunged into the front of the housing leaving only the back bumper remaining outside.

Bluff Schools Closed for Third Day

POPLAR BLUFF, Mo., — The 12 public schools of Poplar Bluff remained closed for the third day Thursday as teachers remained out of the classrooms over a wage dispute with the school board.

School Supt. Fred M. Morrow said Thursday a meeting between the Community Teacher's Association (CTA) and school board Wednesday night failed to bring the dispute closer to a settlement. He said that no new meetings are scheduled at present.

Members of the CTA voted to stage the walkout MOnday night following unsuccessful weekend negotiations with the school board. Schools were closed Tuesday after picket lines were set up by the teachers in front of school buses.

The superintendent estimated that about 75 per cent of the city's 290 education personnel took part in the walkout. Popular Bluff with a population of about 20,000 has a public school enrollment of about 5,500.

The impasse in negotiations is the school board's contention that it cannot grant raises to the teachers unless a Missouri income tax referendum is passed April 7. School board president E. M. Peters said that passage of the statewide referendum would allow increases of from $500 to $700 for teachers.

Salaries for teachers in Poplar Bluff presently range from $5,700 to $8,000.

Mrs. Marjorie Summers, president of the CTA, said teachers are seeking a starting salary of $6,200, or $100 more than the salary offered by the board if the referendum passes.

Mrs. Summers said the official Easter holidays begin Friday and that many teachers will use the time to seek employment in other cities for next year. The holidays extend through Monday.

Fire Damages Cairo Motel

CAIRO — Fire about 8:25 p.m. Wednesday during an electrical storm destroyed the major part of an addition to the Cairo Motel, at the junction of Rts. 3 and 51 about two miles north of Cairo. This was the second major fire in the area in a month, the North Cairo Hotel was destroyed Feb. 26.

Firemen from six towns, manning 10 pieces of equipment, were able to save two rooms on the end of the addition and were able to save two other sections of the motel. Firemen fought the blaze for two hours before bringing it under control. All of the guests were able to get out safely.

Firemen were hampered in their efforts to get water to fight the fire. Cairo Auxiliary Fire Department hooked their hose to a fire hydrant at the State Weight Station. Mound City firemen drafted water from a ditch across the road. The remainder of the fire departments came to Cairo to get water.

A Mound City fireman, Julius Berry, was injured when he stuck a nail in his foot.

Acting Cairo Fire Chief Capt. Larry Dowdy said the fire apparently started from lightening striking a transformer on the building.

Cairo firemen were called back to the scene Thursday at 6:50 a.m., where they found a mattress on fire in one of the rooms. This fire was quickly extinguished.

Cairo firemen, the first on the scene, said the building was engulfed in flames by the time they arrived. They said they had to stop at the intersection due to the low- hanging smoke, before going on to the fire.

Firemen from the Cairo Fire Department, Cairo Auxiliary Fire Department, and fire departments in Mounds, Mound City, Olmsted, Tamms and Wickliffe responded to the alarm.

Good Morning Charlie:

The Standard's Progress Edition was another first rate job -- and the ads were as attractive and indicative of progress as the copy.

The only complaint I heard was from our mailman who claims he reinjured a World War II hernia trying to lift the paper up to our mailbox...

Anxiously awaiting next year's Progress Edition -- will buy the mailman a truss in anticipation.

Big Change Proposedfor Health Care

WASHINGTON (AP) — Hoping to stimulate the growth of comprehensive, prepaid health programs, the Nixon administration has proposed a major change in medicare and medicaid.

It would permit elderly or poor persons to contract for comprehensive medical services from private organizations, a move the government contends would help halt the rising costs of medical care.

"Our goal is that every elderly or poor person covered by medicare or medicaid be given the right to choose between receiving services under such a contract and receiving individual hospital and physician services in the traditional manner," said Robert H. Finch, secretary of Health, Education and Welfare.

In congressional testimony made public Wednesday, Finch proposed giving elderly persons a choice between current programs or prepaid programs offering hospitalization, out-patient treatment and preventive care.

HEW Undersecretary John G. Veneman said the 20 million persons now covered under the social security-based medicare plan receive hospital benefits under one section and payment for physicians care and other services under a second, optional section costing $4 a month. The figure is scheduled to rise to $5.30 next July 1.

The comprehensive program "would be provided under a health, maintenance contract calling for payment of a fixed annual sum negotiated in advance at the price less than the government presently pays for conventional medicare benefits in the locality," he said.

"Several types of health organizations and plans have shown strong, though not conclusive, evidence that they can provide or organize a broad spectrum of high qualiy services, efficiently and economically," Veneman said.

"They have been successful in reducing the incidents and duration of higher cost institutional care," he added. "Indications are that many more of those organizations could be developed with the removal of legal barriers which exist at the state level."

The American Medical Association was expected to strongly oppose the plan, Finch and Veneman said.

"We must promote diversity, choice and healthy competition in American medicine if we are to escape from the grip of spiraling costs," Finch said.

Soybean Producers to Vote on Promotion

Soybeans producers of Southeast MIssouri will make decisions within the next few days that may effect the income of soybean producers for years to come, John Stephens, West Memphis, Ark., southern field representative, of the American Soybean association, said today

Beginning on Monday, soybean producers could go to their county Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service office, to register and become eligible to vote in the soybean referendum, April 20-24.

Those, who have registered and produce over 250 bushels annually, will be eligible to vote, Stephens said.

The voting will be on the question whether soybean producers will have deducted from proceeds of sale of their beans, one half cent per bushel for a self- help financing program for market promotion, research and education. One fourth of this amount will go for research and education, and the other one fourth for market promotion.

The referendum has been made possible through legislation passed by the Missouri assembly in 1969.

The field representative pointed out that market promotion involves going out after markets for soybeans with the greatest potential being the markets overseas. He added that there was competition but that experience has proved during the past few years that we can get some of these markets with some efforts and advertising and hard selling, which takes money. The producers have to take the lead in these programs, Stephens said.

He also pointed out the great need for upping per acre yields, which have not gone up much since the region started growing soybeans. In adding to the value of soybeans, he said, the American consumes 50 pounds of vegetable oil annually, while persons in undeveloped countries receive no more than 10 pounds. The protein nutrient value of one acre of soybeans grown is equal to 10 acres of livestock raising.

Dockins said the thieves gained entrance by forcing a door open. The loss included three 500-ft. rolls of 2tw, one 1,000-ft. roll of No.4, and about 10,000 feet of used wire

Malden police and the Dunklin County Sheriff's Department are investigating.

TV Reruns Popping up By Leaps

NEW YORK (AP) — Spring has scarcely made its debut, but already it is beginning to look like summer in televisionland.

By the end of this week a baker's dozen series will have gone into re-runs—and that doesn't count theatrical films on their second trip out. By the end of another three weeks, just about every series will be an oft-told tale.

If the TV season seems shorter than it used to, it's because it IS shorter—almost three months shorter than 10 or 15 years ago. Once the usual series was committed to turn out 39 weeks of shows. Today many series make no more than 24 programs, depending on a couple of pre-emptions of their time period to fill out the six month run.

Why re-runs? Network executives say it is a matter of economics. If each episode of a series costs, say, $100,000, a second time out on the network amortizes that production cost. It may not cut the average to $50,000—there are the re-run fees to pay performers—but it helps.

CBS' special, "Fight For Life" on Tuesday night was an unusual film study of a tribe of Eskimos at their northern Canada winter encampment where in 30 and 40 below zero temperatures they hunt seal below Arctic sea ice.

It was an hour which viewers with central heating and handy stoves shivered over, watching these hardy nomads in bitter cold hunting in primitive fashion. In contrast there was their warm family life, the sharing, the laughter and their happy times together.

The Netsilik Eskimos lived close together in igloos which were never above freezing. The men hunted in groups and the seal was their staff of life. They ate its flesh, tanned its skin for clothing, burned its blubber for cooking. A harpooned seal provided food for the group for several days. Scenes of the catch and the ritualistic butchering of the sea mammal were pretty grisly, particularly in color.

Since the film was shot five years ago, the Netsiliks have been established in permanent settlements and no longer pursue the caribou during the short summer and the seal in the long Arctic night.

Elizabeth Taylor and Burton seemed more relaxed and less "on" when interviewed by Charles Collingwood on CBS' "60 Minutes" than during a much longer interview last week with David Frost.

The CBS interview was shot at Miss Taylor's parents' home in Los Angeles. Both interviews inevitably covered much the same areas.

More interesting were Harry Reasoner's report on a recent visit to military installations in Israel and—closer to home and the American pocketbook—a report on the ineffectiveness of today's automobile bumpers.

Hayti Youth Hits Fence at 120 MPH

CARUTHERSVILLE--A small, well enforced, brick wall, constructed in the front yard of a Ward Avenue home belonging to Cliff Smith which was built to keep cars from flying through the home, has been demolished once again. A car, driven at a high rate of speed, crashed through the wall at 5:20 a.m. Sunday.

Caruthersville Police identified the driver of the 1966 Buick as Ricky Swan, 17, of 807 East Moore in Hayti. Swan, who was driving east on Highway U, told police that he was going 120 mph. Highway U ends directly in front of the Smith home.

According to Caruthersville Police Chief E. R. "Doc" Stone, Swan will be charged with careless and reckless driving while drinking. He stated that the boy was in the Femiscot County Memorial Hospital in Hayti with minor chin and mouth injuries.

Although the fence was demolished, the home was not touched by the vehicle. However, on one occasion a vehicle plunged into the front of the housing leaving only the back bumper remaining outside.

Bluff Schools Closed for Third Day

POPLAR BLUFF, Mo., — The 12 public schools of Poplar Bluff remained closed for the third day Thursday as teachers remained out of the classrooms over a wage dispute with the school board.

School Supt. Fred M. Morrow said Thursday a meeting between the Community Teacher's Association (CTA) and school board Wednesday night failed to bring the dispute closer to a settlement. He said that no new meetings are scheduled at present.

Members of the CTA voted to stage the walkout MOnday night following unsuccessful weekend negotiations with the school board. Schools were closed Tuesday after picket lines were set up by the teachers in front of school buses.

The superintendent estimated that about 75 per cent of the city's 290 education personnel took part in the walkout. Popular Bluff with a population of about 20,000 has a public school enrollment of about 5,500.

The impasse in negotiations is the school board's contention that it cannot grant raises to the teachers unless a Missouri income tax referendum is passed April 7. School board president E. M. Peters said that passage of the statewide referendum would allow increases of from $500 to $700 for teachers.

Salaries for teachers in Poplar Bluff presently range from $5,700 to $8,000.

Mrs. Marjorie Summers, president of the CTA, said teachers are seeking a starting salary of $6,200, or $100 more than the salary offered by the board if the referendum passes.

Mrs. Summers said the official Easter holidays begin Friday and that many teachers will use the time to seek employment in other cities for next year. The holidays extend through Monday.

Fire Damages Cairo Motel

CAIRO — Fire about 8:25 p.m. Wednesday during an electrical storm destroyed the major part of an addition to the Cairo Motel, at the junction of Rts. 3 and 51 about two miles north of Cairo. This was the second major fire in the area in a month, the North Cairo Hotel was destroyed Feb. 26.

Firemen from six towns, manning 10 pieces of equipment, were able to save two rooms on the end of the addition and were able to save two other sections of the motel. Firemen fought the blaze for two hours before bringing it under control. All of the guests were able to get out safely.

Firemen were hampered in their efforts to get water to fight the fire. Cairo Auxiliary Fire Department hooked their hose to a fire hydrant at the State Weight Station. Mound City firemen drafted water from a ditch across the road. The remainder of the fire departments came to Cairo to get water.

A Mound City fireman, Julius Berry, was injured when he stuck a nail in his foot.

Acting Cairo Fire Chief Capt. Larry Dowdy said the fire apparently started from lightening striking a transformer on the building.

Cairo firemen were called back to the scene Thursday at 6:50 a.m., where they found a mattress on fire in one of the rooms. This fire was quickly extinguished.

Cairo firemen, the first on the scene, said the building was engulfed in flames by the time they arrived. They said they had to stop at the intersection due to the low- hanging smoke, before going on to the fire.

Firemen from the Cairo Fire Department, Cairo Auxiliary Fire Department, and fire departments in Mounds, Mound City, Olmsted, Tamms and Wickliffe responded to the alarm.
